What Happens November 6th and After?

A federal directive that has gone largely ignored

by: Alex Lekas 10/20/2024
AlexLekas.substack.com

Two things are almost certain to occur after the presidential election: 1) the losing side will contest the result, claiming some sort of shenanigans occurred. It will not matter if the claims are legitimate or not. Public trust in the system's ability to stage a clean, fair election and deliver honest results has been plummeting for years. 2) The odds of violence occurring are high enough that most Americans expect it to happen.

Neither of these developments speaks to a healthy republic. There is also another wrinkle in the mix, one that is sure to spark cries of 'conspiracy theory.' It is called Federal Directive 5240.01. [Read it at TFPnews.com] if you're up to wading through the sort of language that not even lawyers enjoy using but probably have in order to cover all bases and all asses.

The first 10-12 pages read like boilerplate material on Defense Department doctrine regarding intelligence, and the various times and circumstances in which it may be appropriate to work with civilian law enforcement. Then comes page 13, when the DoD's brief expands toward using troops in matters where lethal force may be justified. Lethal force by the US military against American citizens.

This directive was updated on September 27th and contains enough weasel wording that a suspicious view of its purpose would result in accusations of tin foil hattery. The measure speaks to unspecified situations when troops may be called in “for any situation in which it is reasonably foreseeable that providing the requested assistance may involve the use of force that is likely to result in lethal force.” The ability to reasonably foresee such events rests with the Secretary of Defense.

Having gone through the civil rights era marches, the Vietnam War protests and more recently, the BLM and Antifa riots without the necessity of lethal options, what has changed to justify this? Remarkably, or perhaps predictably, the corporate press is parroting the DoD line of “nothing to see here.” Outside of that echo chamber, other publications are not so sure that this is just another benign measure being spun into something sinister.

RFK, Jr. took the directive seriously enough to talk about it on the campaign trail. He did so while noting how Harris is accusing Trump of wanting to do what the administration she is part of has already done. You have probably heard more than once that the government has a monopoly on violence, but this is usually associated with law enforcement and how every single measure is backed by the implicit use of force. The military is exempt from this discussion because the armed forces have never been considered part of the law enforcement apparatus. This directive appears to change that.

Are people like Bobby Kennedy and the few journos who have reported on this directive making too much of it? Hard to say, but many people will remember this pearl from Senator Chuck Schumer in 2017 during an appearance on MSNBC. Even more jarring than Schumer saying (with a straight face) that the intel community can and will find ways of “getting back at you” was the host blithely nodding along as if that was a normal thing to say.

I understand the host was Rachel Maddow, but she is supposed to be an intelligent woman, a Rhodes scholar, someone we might presume would say, “Wait just a minute here; did you really say that?” but, no. Her response was as if Schumer had said that the IRS is in the tax collection business. On what planet does 1) a sitting Senator admit to and justify a virtually omnipotent intel and surveillance state and 2) on what planet does a talking head not think such a statement is out of bounds? By that reckoning, federal directive

Letter from the Editor

by: Leesa Bolden, LAc
TFPF Editor in Chief

Well the election is over and we can all take a huge sigh of relief. If nothing else, NO more political ads are being pushed down our throats. I am so very grateful that Donald J. Trump will be leading the charge once again. I am shocked that there are many who cannot see that if he was going to be the horrible leader they are saying he will be that he would have been that person when he was in office. At the same time those same people believe Kamala would have done great things despite doing nothing good for the people while in office.

The enemy within that he was referencing are the political leaders and the wealthy donors that have been leading this country down a path to destroy the United States, NOT ordinary citizens living life as best we can. We must put America first at this time because we are a failing Nation. It is much like putting your gas mask on first before helping others. We cannot save the World, dead. The enemy within is putting people like Tina Peters in prison while letting Jena Griswald of Colorado get away with absolute negligence. Please go to our website and educate yourself about Tina Peters and the absolute corruption in Colorado. We have videos and articles that will make your head spin. Free Tina Peters! Free all political prisoners!

I pray that those who still stand in support of Kamala Harris and are furious about the election results will realize that most of the time in life, the worst thing that could happen in life, turns into the best possible thing that could have happened in life if given the chance.

I pray for this Country. I pray for this World and all of its inhabitants that we all may come to know God and peace. We have a tremendous amount of work to do to get our Country and World back. This WIN is only the beginning, we have much awakening to do and there is no one that is going to save us from the swamp creatures, (WEF, WHO...)

La Paz County ran out of paper ballots and there was a bomb threat on the La Paz County Records office and then the County Supervisors office. The Bomb squad out of Lake Havasu had to come clear the building and it was only a threat. This delayed the result by many hours.

I hope you enjoy this month's issue. Read the paper from wherever you are and send a digital or physical copy to all of your friends and family by purchasing a monthly subscription. The cost is only $2.50/mo or $24/yr digital and $5/mo or $54/yr mail & digital!

Big Pharma is Shelling Out Billions to Control Science

by: Tracy Beanz & Michelle Edwards
10/17/2024
TheHighWire.com

Over the course of nine years, from 2013 to 2022, physicians in the United States received $12.1 billion from Big Pharma. Payments varied between specialties and between physicians within the same specialty. Orthopedic surgeons were paid the most at $1.36 billion, followed by neurologists and psychiatrists at $1.32 billion and cardiologists at $1.29 billion. But the influence peddling doesn't stop there. The doctors entrusted to care for Americans are not the only aspect of healthcare heavily influenced by the industry doing its darndest to keep us unwell and maintain repeat customers. No indeed. Big Pharma also pays peer reviewers—those tasked to perform the final action in what the industry claims makes a paper trustworthy—big bucks to examine studies. Between 2020 and 2022, the pharmaceutical industry paid reviewers $1.06 billion.

We are repeatedly told that peer reviewers are essential. How often during COVID-19 did we witness reports that offered a way out of the pandemic madness—but yet also excluded the deadly jabs and offered a glimpse of their harm—being cast aside, frequently admonished by corrupt fact-checkers quick to declare, “That paper is not peer-reviewed.”

Undoubtedly, today's healthcare system is controlled by the best skewed science money can buy. An October 10, 2024, research letter in JAMA titled “Payments by Drug and Medical Device Manufacturers to US Peer Reviewers of Major Medical Journals” focused on peer reviewers for The BMJ, JAMA, The Lancet, and The New England Journal of Medicine. The study authors chose these journals “for their high impact factor and reputation as leading publications of original general medical research.” The study revealed the following troubling results:

“Between 2020 and 2022, 1155 peer reviewers (58.9%) received at least one industry payment. More than half (54.0%) of reviewers accepted general payments, while 31.8% received research payments.

Reviewers received $1.06 billion in industry payments between 2020 and 2022, including $1.00 billion (94.0%) to individuals or their institutions and $64.18 million (6.0%) in general payments. Consulting fees and speaking compensation unrelated to continuing medical education programs accounted for $34.31 million and $11.80 million, respectively. Over the three years, the median general payment was $7,614 (IQR, $495-$43,069), and the median research payment was $153,173 (IQR, $29,307-$835,637) among reviewers receiving such payments.

Male reviewers had significantly higher median total payments ($38,959 vs $19,586) and general payments ($8,663 vs $4,183) than female reviewers. Statistically significant differences in payments existed between specialties.”

The authors of the study rightly conclude that more research and, most importantly, transparency regarding industry payments in the peer-review process are urgently needed. They are right about that, but this call for transparency should not be limited to peer review—it should be a fundamental principle throughout healthcare. As noted above (for at least a decade) physicians have been persuaded with payments for consulting services, non-consulting services, food and beverages, travel and lodging, entertainment, education, gifts, grants, charitable contributions, and honoraria made to physicians.

This unhinged setup breeds corruption, and no doubt contributes to the unprecedented levels of disease and illness that plague our nation. The scope of the deceit brings to mind the scheme surrounding Dr. Anthony Fauci's emergency telephone conference in early 2020, which was no doubt planned to shape the ‘origins of COVID’ narrative. The level of immorality attained by those entrusted to protect our health should serve as a stark reminder of the perils of a lack of transparency. How much were Fauci and his cohorts paid to propagandize the tyranny that resulted from the fear they created around a virus no more harmful than the flu in order to inject the masses with an experimental gene therapy?

The curtain is pulled back, and the game is straightforward. Big Pharma is shelling out billions to destroy our health. With the FDA's hand in its pocket, Big Pharma paid over $1 billion over the course of two years—during the height of the COVID-19 mRNA gene-damaging jab rollout—to influence medical publications. As intended, a peer reviewer is a subject matter expert who evaluates the quality, validity, and significance of a scholarly or academic work before it is published or accepted, ensuring that the work meets the necessary standards of the field. The peer review process is supposed to maintain the quality and integrity of the work before them. Instead, the system has been degraded as another arm of corruption—with ghostwritten articles by compromised scientists promoting a false narrative that is on a fast track to steal our freedom. We cannot continue to allow federal funds to support such a destructive system.

North Korea Is Involved Now, Too

by SchiffGold 11/01/2024
www.schiffgold.com

A new army is marching for the front lines of the Ukraine war. Though they are dressed in Russian uniforms, these soldiers are half a world away from their homes. Five thousand miles from their position, in Pyongyang, North Korea, a dictator is directing their movements, ordering his men into a conflict that is now primed to antagonize most of the Western world.

“The deployment of North Korean troops represents ... a significant escalation in the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea (DPRK)’s ongoing involvement in Russia’s illegal war,” NATO Secretary General Mark Rutte warned. “[It is also] yet another breach of UN Security Council resolutions. And ... a dangerous expansion of Russia’s war.”

So far, none of the North Korean troops have seen combat. But officials say it’s only a matter of time before Russia takes advantage of its dangerous new weapon. “This is something that we’re going to continue to watch,” said U.S. Secretary of State Lloyd Austin. “And we’re going to continue working with our allies and partners to discourage Russia from employing these troops in combat.”

North Korean forces are heading for Kursk, a fiercely contested region on the Ukrainian border where Russian control has grown increasingly tenuous in recent weeks. According to the Moscow Times, an independent Russian newspaper, the situation in Kursk represents a significant challenge to Russian military superiority and may even threaten its border sovereignty—and thus it remains a high-priority target for Russian officials.

“The operation in the Kursk region has also sent a powerful signal to allies and those who still believe in Russia’s invincibility,” Dmytro Zhmilo, executive director of the Ukrainian Security and Cooperation Center, wrote for the Times. “Every day that Ukrainian forces are in the Kursk region is proof that all the statements about the Kremlin’s red line are meaningless.”

Ukrainians strategists hope North Korean troops won’t bring about the swift regional victory Russia seems to expect. Intelligence suggests that Russian and Korean troops may be struggling to assimilate, fighting over dwindling supplies and language barriers. In an audio recording that allegedly contains intercepted phone calls, Russian soldiers threw harsh insults both at their Korean auxiliaries and their own superior officers. “I want to kill him today, yes, after the Koreans,” one soldier snapped, after an order was handed down from a superior officer that would deprive Russian troops of already-scarce armored vehicles.

Meanwhile, the U.S. and the rest of the world are watching anxiously as North Korea and Russia keep quiet about the details of their strengthened alliance and what they plan to do with their combined forces.

The U.S. is within range of North Korean ICBM missiles, a fact that came into sharp focus this week with the launch of another long-range ballistic missile from within North Korean borders. The weapon, which splashed harmlessly into the Pacific, could be an early sign of intent to launch a weapon toward the U.S., according to South Korean intelligence. “It was the longest flying time of any missile so far,” Japanese Defense Minister Gen Nakatani told reporters. “I think it may be different from conventional missiles.”

Only time will tell whether North Korea’s missile launch, its recently positioned mobile launcher, and its seventh nuclear test are more than political posturing. Timing the escalation right before a U.S. presidential election suggests that the North Koreans are taking aim directly at American democracy, a fact that only increases the tension surrounding the highly contested ballot boxes.

The economy has taken note of these tensions, with consumers rushing to purchase assets marked as “safe haven” commodities. “As a brick-and-mortar seller, we are seeing many first-time [gold] buyers,” Nick Fulton, managing partner at USA Pawn, previously told Newsweek. “With gold seeing an increase of 25 percent in value in the last six months, it is attracting new investors.”

So far, there is no word from the White House on a possible U.S. response to conflict abroad, except to note that North Korean troops in Ukraine constitute “legitimate targets” of military operations. “If [North Korean troops] do deploy to fight against Ukraine, they’re fair game, they’re fair targets, and the Ukrainian military will defend themselves against North Korean soldiers the same way they’re defending themselves against Russian soldiers,” said John Kirby, White House National Security Communications Adviser. “So the possibility that there could be dead and wounded North Korean soldiers fighting against Ukraine is absolutely real if they get deployed.”

Urgent Message to ALL LLC’s and Corporations: Fast Approaching Deadline to File a Federal Report with Severe, Costly Penalties for Non-Compliance

The Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN) is pivotal in the fight against financial crimes, particularly through its enforcement of Beneficial Ownership Information (BOI) reporting requirements. Established under the Corporate Transparency Act (CTA), these requirements mandate that certain entities, including corporations and limited liability companies, disclose their beneficial owners—those individuals who ultimately control or benefit from the entity.

As of January 1, 2024, new entities must file their BOI reports within 90 days of their formation, while existing entities have until January 1, 2025, to comply with the new regulations. Entities formed after January 1, 2025 will have 30 days to file their BOI report. This move aims to enhance transparency in corporate ownership, making it more difficult for criminals to hide illicit activities behind anonymous corporate structures.

Penalties for failing to report or for providing false information can be severe. Civil penalties can reach up to $500 per day for non-compliance, and criminal violations may result in fines of up to $10,000 and imprisonment for up to two years.

By implementing these stringent reporting requirements, FinCEN seeks to strengthen the integrity of the U.S. financial system, providing law enforcement agencies with critical tools to investigate and prevent money laundering and other financial crimes. The deadline for compliance emphasizes the urgency and importance of these regulations in promoting corporate accountability.

It is recommended you research the requirements for this reporting at www.FinCEN.gov/BOI or contact an accountant or an attorney for more information. Locally contact Loretta Warner 816-516-4890 for filing.

What Happens Nov. 6th & After 5240.01 sounds increasingly plausible.

To attempt to put the veracity of claims surrounding Federal Directive 5240.01 to the test, something called The Center for an Informed Public at the University of Washington took a look. The organization's conclusion and its insistence on couching a directive that anyone can read for themselves as a "rumor" - which it did 19 times in its report - suggests that concern is not unwarranted. The question then becomes, could it happen?

Well, as one sitting member of Congress and the current President have said when speaking about gun owners, yes, it could. Eric Swalwell invoked nuclear weapons in assessing how to deal with people who refused to give up their firearms, while Joe Biden said the public would need F-16s to take on the government. Never mind that no responsible person has suggested going to war against DC. That two elected officials are that comfortable in openly talking about the use of war tools against citizens should be disqualifying on its face, even if the casual disregard for basic rights is not.

Lloyd James Austin III

Now, do I expect this to happen? Not really. For one thing, who wants to be remembered as the person who gave American military members the go-ahead to fire on citizens? Killing one's own constituents is a particularly bad look for people who drone on and on about "our democracy." It also rests on the belief that every single service member would follow such an order without question, which is unlikely. If conditions descend to that level, then the empire has truly fallen.

There is no way of saying that the military is or may be preparing to respond to potential election unrest in a good way. It's sinister no matter what wording is used. But the directive says what it says. The language is not accidental, it did slip through unnoticed, and it was

by: Tyler Durden 10/28/2024
ZeroHedge.com

After being indoctrinated for almost a decade to believe that their political opponents are secret Nazis ready to install a fascist regime, it's not surprising that Democrats are freaking out over recent polls indicating a potential Trump win in the November elections. Convinced that America 2024 is going to be a repeat of Germany 1933, ignorant leftists are scrambling to determine whether or not to leave the US or "start a revolution." The anxiety is palpable.

The New Yorker recently asserted in an arduous and rambling article spanning centuries of political history and every rhetorical cliché imaginable that, essentially, Trump is likely to win.

The outlet describes Kamala Harris as "virtuous" (which is laughable), but they suggest this trait is not respected enough within the American political sphere. They lament the undeniable shift of global politics to the conservative right while refusing to ask why it's happening? They simply default to the old low-IQ and low effort accusations of "racism" and "xenophobia." The New Yorker argues: "Even when it is utterly self-destructive - as in Britain, where the xenophobia of Brexit cut the U.K. off from traditional allies while increasing immigration from the Global South—the apprehension that "we" are being flooded by frightening foreigners works its malign magic.

It's an old but persistent delusion that far-right nationalism is not rooted in the emotional needs of far-right nationalists but arises instead, from the injustices of neoliberalism..."

The mass immigration from the third world continues in Britain because the same progressive elitists are still in charge despite the Brexit vote. That's why the country is spiraling into a pit of criminality, mass stabblings and a rape epidemic. It's the reason why the British voted for Brexit in the first place.

Brexit and the end of mass immigration is the will of the majority of the people, just as it's the will of the majority of people in many parts of Europe and the US. Yet, leftists who pontificate endlessly about the virtues of democracy dismiss the majority when it suits them. It is this arrogance of the political left that has led directly to the rise of the right wing movement that so utterly terrifies them.

The problem is, leftists never take responsibility because they see this as an expression of weakness, and also because their moral relativism allows them to rationalize any behavior as necessary "for the greater good." Their main character syndrome spurs them to believe they are the ultimate good in the world, and if they are the ultimate good then anyone who dares oppose them must be the ultimate evil.

This is why they have a tendency to demonize their political opposition in extreme ways. The New Yorker describes Trump as singularly dangerous, comparing him to mobsters, tyrants and even cancer: “Trumpism is a cancerous phenomenon. Treated with surgery once, it now threatens to come back in a more aggressive form, subject neither to the radiation of “guardrails” nor to the chemo of “constraints.” It may well rage out of control and kill its host...”

This kind of rhetoric is exactly why there have been at least two assassination attempts on Trump’s life; attempts which the leftist media then shamelessly blamed on Trump. It’s also gaslighting, considering the level of tyranny Democrats have engaged in under Biden and the contempt they have displayed for American ideals over the past decade.

The fantasy world of the left is rife with paranoia built on a foundation of emotional sand rather than evidence. They see a new Trump term as the end of everything: “Having lost the popular vote (as he surely will) he will not speak up to reconcile “all Americans.” He will insist that he won the popular vote, and by a landslide. He will pardon and then celebrate the January 6th insurrectionists, and thereby guarantee the existence of a paramilitary organization that’s capable of committing violence on his behalf without fear of consequences. He will (with an obedient Attorney General) begin prosecuting his political opponents...”

“When he begins to pressure CNN and ABC, and they - with all the vulnerabilities of large corporations - bend to his will, telling themselves that this is now the will of the people, what will we do to fend off the slow degradation of open debate? Trump will certainly abandon Ukraine to Vladimir Putin and realign this country with dictatorships and against NATO and the democratic alliance of Europe. Above all, the spirit of vengeful reprisal is the totality of his beliefs—very much like the fascists of the twentieth century in being a man and a movement without any positive doctrine except revenge against his imagined enemies...”

The establishment media has imagined quite a reformation of American politics at the hands of Trump, and a lot of it actually sounds pretty good. However, as many conservatives have noted, if Trump had authoritarian intentions why didn’t he follow through on them during his first term?

Some would argue that he did too little in the face of the city burning antics of BLM, and that he should have pushed harder to stop the legal railroading of the J6 protesters who did little in comparison to the race rioters. Where is this uncompromising zealot that The New Yorker describes? He doesn’t exist.

What is this really about? It’s about the political left’s unspoken fear of a justified reckoning. Deep down, they know they deserve punishment and they know most of the country has no interest in protecting them.

High Efficiency Water Softeners

They’ve spent years instigating civil unrest, they attempted an authoritarian takeover of the country using covid mandates as a foil, they lied incessantly about the threat of a stagflation crisis, they colluded to violate the 1st Amendment as the Biden White House and Big Tech platforms worked together to censor public discourse online, and they have targeted American children with sexualized gender ideology in public schools in an attempt to convert them permanently to the far-left cult. They know what they have done and they know consequences are incoming.

A lot of them are talking about leaving the country should Trump prevail in November, as the New York Times reports. Their reasons vary, but worries of “fascism” top the list while others say they want to be able to trans their children (or abort their children) without interference. The reality is that no one will miss these people and the US would be better off without them. They would be doing the country a favor by running away.

Talk of “revolution” has been much less pronounced compared to 2016, and this suggests that leftists realize their grift is finally over. They are some of the most hated people on the planet, and for good reason. They spent the last several years burning every bridge and violating every principle that Americans hold dear in the pursuit of ultimate power. They’re also losing popularity in Europe, it’s not just an American trend.

Trump may or may not pursue an administration of “vengeance”. It’s likely he will not act on most of the scenarios the New Yorker describes. Democrats focus a lot on Trump as if he’s the source of their ills. What they don’t understand is that it’s not really Trump they should be worried about - It’s the millions of people suffering under progressive governments and aggressive woke activism that present the biggest threat.

You can’t simply engage in the wanton destruction of western culture, economics, freedom and morality and then pretend like you’re a victim when the torches and pitchforks come calling.

Kamala Harris's Secret Ties to Voting Machine Moguls: Is She Fit to [Be] President?

by: Brendi Wells 10/29/2024
Jellyfish.news

The Uncovered Connections

Harris's undisclosed connections trace back to Emhoff's former boss, Sir Nigel Knowles, a knighted figure in the UK and founding director of SGO, Smartmatic's parent company. Smartmatic is part of a network of companies (Dominion, ES&S, Sequoia, Diebold, OpTech) responsible for managing voting machines across key states like Nevada, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Georgia, and Michigan. Knowles and Lord Mark Malloch-Brown, another SGO director, are influential in the international sphere and are linked to allegations surrounding voting system integrity. Yet, despite her close ties to this network through her husband, Harris failed to disclose these relationships publicly.

What This Means for US Democracy

Transparency is paramount for any candidate seeking the highest office. By hiding these connections, Harris has breached the public's trust and left her ethics in serious question. These associations go beyond personal ties; they represent potential conflicts of interest that threaten election security and national sovereignty. If Harris's husband has connections to the very voting systems that decide U.S. elections, this puts her in a position of divided loyalties—one that could undermine the democratic principles she claims to champion.

A Historical Context of Ethical Breaches

This level of conflict is unprecedented. Harris's hidden links to British knighthood (Knowles was knighted in 2008) and to figures of the British Pilgrims Society suggest a possible intertwining of foreign influence with U.S. democratic functions. In 2014, Malloch-Brown and Knowles launched SGO with Antonio Mugica, Smartmatic's CEO, in a move that consolidated their influence over election technologies worldwide. This connection is one Harris should have publicly accounted for, as her direct ties to individuals in control of voting technology appear to cross ethical boundaries.

Documents Reveal Overlooked Disclosures

Several public records—including Harris and Emhoff's 2019 IRS Form 1040, Emhoff's departure from DLA Piper in 2020, and an Executive Branch Public Financial Disclosure Report—reveal a concerning lack of transparency about these associations. The Smartmatic website removed pages referencing Malloch-Brown, Knowles, and their U.S. voting machine connections around November 2020, though archives such as the Wayback Machine retained the information, suggesting deliberate obfuscation of these relationships.

The Conclusion: Harris is Unfit to [Be] President

Given the breadth of these concealed associations and their implications for national security, Kamala Harris's connections present an indisputable conflict of interest. The American people deserve leaders with unimpeachable loyalty to democratic values, free from foreign or corporate ties that compromise their decision-making. Harris's failure to disclose these affiliations is an ethics violation that, at the very least, disqualifies her from serving in high office.

Kamala Harris's candidacy poses a risk to election integrity and national sovereignty. These facts demonstrate that she is not fit to run for the presidency of the United States.

How Kamala Harris's Husband Doug Emhoff Profits From North Carolina Lithium Mines

by: Admin 10/07/2024
www.CostaricanTimes.com

Doug Emhoff, the husband of Vice President Kamala Harris, has found himself in the public spotlight for reasons that go beyond his position as the country's "Second Gentleman." As a successful attorney, Emhoff had a well-established career in Hollywood representing high-profile clients. However, recent reports have linked him to the burgeoning lithium industry, particularly the rich deposits of spodumene ore in North Carolina. With electric vehicle (EV) subsidies becoming a central part of the Biden-Harris administration's policies, questions arise about the profits being made from these mines and how Emhoff's connections might be involved.

The EV Subsidy Boom: Harris-Biden Administration's Financial Backing

The Biden-Harris administration has been pouring billions into the electric vehicle industry as part of its push towards green energy. Among the notable initiatives: $15.54 billion in subsidies to the electric vehicle (EV) industry. An additional $621 million allocated for installing EV battery chargers, with a focus on "underserved communities."

These programs aim to accelerate the shift toward electric transportation, which has created a demand for key materials like lithium, used in EV batteries. Among the largest beneficiaries of this lithium rush is Albemarle Corporation, a company closely connected to the growing lithium mining activities in North Carolina.

Albemarle's Collaboration With

Ford Motor Company

In May 2023, Albemarle Corporation (ALB), the world's largest producer of lithium, signed an agreement with Ford Motor Company to supply over 100,000 metric tons of battery-grade lithium hydroxide. This contract would support the production of approximately 3 million EV batteries for Ford over five years, from 2026 to 2030. This collaboration underscores the importance of lithium to the EV industry and places Albemarle at the forefront of domestic lithium production.

However, there's more beneath the surface of this lucrative deal, especially concerning Doug Emhoff's indirect involvement. BlackRock, a global investment management corporation with major investments in Albemarle, is a significant player here. BlackRock's success has played a major role in Emhoff and Harris amassing their fortune, much like the financial trajectory of former President Barack Obama.

The Kings Mountain Mine: A Key to Domestic EV Production

The Kings Mountain lithium mine in North Carolina (which Albemarle plans to reopen) is one of the richest spodumene ore deposits in the world. This mine could produce enough lithium to power 1.2 million electric vehicles annually, making it critical for the U.S. domestic EV battery supply chain.

In May 2024, Albemarle delayed its plans to reopen the mine, but the company has continued to benefit from the $90 million grant awarded by the Biden-Harris Defense Department. This grant is designed to boost domestic mining operations and ensure a steady supply of lithium, vital for America's electric vehicle future.

The Biden-Harris Administration's Involvement in EV and Lithium Development

While the financial success of BlackRock and Albemarle is well documented, the direct involvement of the Biden-Harris administration in boosting the lithium industry cannot be ignored. The administration's policies are shaping the future of green energy, and with it, the lithium mining industry.

Subsidies for EV production: The massive investments in the EV sector have driven up the demand for lithium, with Kings Mountain positioned as a key source.

Favorable policies for domestic mining: The $90 million grant to Albemarle (awarded under the Defense Production Act) signals the administration's intention to ensure the United States is a major player in the lithium market.

Financial ties to BlackRock: The corporation's investments in Albemarle, and its connection to Emhoff and Harris, raise questions about potential conflicts of interest, especially as these policies and grants benefit the companies tied to their financial success.

Comparisons to Lahaina, Hawaii: Government's Slow Response and Real Estate Speculation

Critics have drawn a connection between the federal government's response to disasters, such as the wildfires in Lahaina, Hawaii, and what is happening in Chimney Rock, North Carolina. In both cases, the slow government response has led to speculation that disaster-stricken areas are being prepped for redevelopment by wealthy investors.

In Maui, for instance, the delay in federal assistance sparked concerns that the government's inaction was intentional, clearing the way for millionaires to swoop in and acquire land. As seen with the Maui fires, federal aid was in the form of loans rather than outright assistance, with many victims receiving only $3,000 in aid. Meanwhile, U.S. taxpayers are funding foreign aid by the billions to other countries, while American citizens are left with minimal assistance. Is this pattern of neglect setting the stage for something similar in North Carolina, where valuable lithium deposits lie beneath the surface?

Lithium and U.S. Energy Policy

The Biden-Harris administration's push for clean energy has also intensified the need for a reliable domestic supply of critical minerals like lithium. While China currently dominates the global lithium supply chain, efforts to develop U.S. lithium sources (like the Kings Mountain mine) are crucial for energy security.

Emhoff's potential involvement in profiting from these developments (particularly through BlackRock's investments) raises legitimate concerns about whether energy policy is being influenced by personal financial interests.

The Personal Scandals of Doug Emhoff

In addition to the business connections, Doug Emhoff has faced his share of personal controversies, which could impact public perception of his and Kamala Harris's actions. Recent revelations have painted Emhoff in a negative light: Cheating allegations: Emhoff reportedly cheated on his first wife (Kerstin Emhoff) with their daughter's teacher and nanny, leading to a pregnancy. Assault claims: Emhoff is also accused of physically assaulting an ex-girlfriend after a charity event, a claim corroborated by multiple witnesses.

These personal scandals, while not directly related to his business dealings, cast a shadow over his public image, particularly when combined with the financial and political questions surrounding his involvement in the lithium industry.

The Intersection of Politics, Energy, and Personal Gain

As the electric vehicle revolution gains momentum, lithium will continue to be a precious commodity. The Biden-Harris administration's subsidies and grants to companies like Albemarle are critical to ensuring a domestic supply of this essential material. However, with Doug Emhoff's financial ties to BlackRock and the growing profits from lithium mining, the potential for personal financial gain has raised serious concerns about the ethical implications of these policies.

In the end, it is clear that Doug Emhoff, Kamala Harris, and their network of political and business connections are deeply intertwined with the future of U.S. energy policy and the EV industry. As the lithium boom continues, the American public will undoubtedly scrutinize the motivations behind these decisions more closely.

Climate Change? Be Very Afraid of CDS — Carbon Derangement Syndrome

by Selwyn Duke
10/31/2024
TheNewAmerican.com

In 2013, astrobiologist Jack O'Malley-James predicted that visible life on Earth would end due to too little atmospheric CO2. No, that's not a typo. The gas' levels will ultimately decline over time (the dinosaur age saw levels five to 10 times today's), O'Malley-James explained. Eventually, they'll drop so low that plants won't be able to photosynthesize, which (of course) will collapse the food chain. Oh and sorry, but you won't be the "last man standing" — unless you happen to be a microbe.

Oh, don't reorganize your investment strategy around this eventuality. Don't resolve to "eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow we die." O'Malley-James says that this deadly CO2 famine won't befall us for another billion years. This helps explain, of course, why politicians won't be talking about it. (It's a bit beyond their period of concern — i.e., the next election cycle.) The good news, too, is that it's also nothing to ever worry about. We'll no doubt destroy ourselves in some other, perhaps novel way, long before then.

CDS

Regarding our demise's author, however, could it be CO2-induced global warming? The mainstream media say yes. In fact, carbon dioxide has become the Donald Trump of the gas world, with CDS (Carbon Derangement Syndrome) afflicting many. Just consider the following ominous headline: "Almost no carbon dioxide absorbed by trees and land in 2023, new study warns." (By the way, if the trees are on strike, that's another rap against the Biden-Harris administration.)

That story ran five days ago. Just two days ago, however, was the following: "Climate Models Fall Short as Plants Absorb 31% More Carbon Than Expected." Then, just a day before the latter was this title: "Global Greenhouse Gases Surge." So, yes, "follow the science"; just be ready to switch directions fast, on really short notice. Yet is CDS warranted at all? Should we worry about how much CO2 is produced or absorbed? Not a bit, says American Thinker (AT), in an article last Friday titled "Simple Facts Expose The Climate Change Hoax."

Much Maligned Gas of Life

AT presents five CO2 myths, along with the site's refutations:

The first: "CO2 is the 'control knob' for the climate. This has been proven to be ridiculous. CO2 makes up only about 0.04% of the atmosphere, while 96–99% of the atmosphere is oxygen and nitrogen. Water vapor, a much larger determinant of temperature, varies from 1–4%. But what determines temperature more than anything else? Changes in the Earth's solar orbit (obviously). NASA has admitted this."

The second: "CO2 is harmful. Wrong! CO2 is plant food. Humans inhale oxygen and exhale CO2. Plants do the reverse. It is scientific fact that higher levels of CO2 lead to greater plant growth. This is essential if we are going to continue to be able to feed an increasing world population and one of the reasons why the planet now supports 8 billion humans." In fact, it is because the gas facilitates plant growth that botanists actually pump it into their greenhouses. Moreover, the Earth has actually gotten greener during the last 35 years owing to higher CO2 levels. (Note: Australia's Great Barrier Reef has also, surprising scientists, experienced rapid growth in recent times. The point is that not everything environmental is doom and gloom.) How High Are CO2 Levels, Really?

Then there's the third myth: "We are at historically high levels of CO2 in the atmosphere. Again, not true. We are actually at historically low levels of CO2. Before the Industrial Revolution, the seminal starting point for climate hysteria (often cited by climate hysterics), the amount of CO2 in the atmosphere was approximately 290 ppm (parts per million). Plant life begins to succumb (it dies) around 150ppm. The amount of CO2 currently in the atmosphere is roughly 420ppm."

During the dinosaur age, the gas' level was approximately 3600ppm — about 8.5 times as high as now. This at least helps account for the copious lush foliage blanketing the Earth at the time. AT then quotes an Armstrong Economics article about warmist sleight-of-hand. To wit: "The data clearly establishes that there has always been a cycle to CO2 long before man's industrial age. This is data government wants to hide. As long as they can pretend CO2 has never risen in the past before 1950, then they can tax the air and pretend it's to prevent climate change. Moreover, while we can clean the air with regulation as we have done, under global warming, they allow "credits" to pollute as long as you pay the government. It is the ultimate scam where they get to tax pollution and people cheer rather than clean up anything." In reality, the U.S.'s air and water are cleaner than they were 60 years ago. We Americans have done a good job with the environment. In contrast, the warmist agenda has actually damaged the environment by causing the destruction of forest. Where's the Crystal Ball?

Finally, there are AT's last two points: "It's nonsensical to create government policies based on future hypotheticals about natural processes. Does it make sense that anybody would base policy (and spend money) on predicting what could happen in the future? Are there not infinite possibilities as to what could happen?"

... If we can't even predict the weather, how can we control it? If you still have arrived at a point where you believe that CO2 is the weather control knob, it's harmful, we're at historically high levels of it, and that the US government (or any other entity on earth, perhaps maybe the UN) can predict the weather, then how would they go about controlling it?"

Late author Michael Crichton made the second-to-last point, about prognosticator folly, beautifully in a 2003 lecture. "Look," he said, if "I was selling stock in a company that I told you would be profitable in 2100, would you buy it? Or would you think the idea was so crazy that it must be a scam?" He then illustrated how people in 1903 had no idea what 2003's world would look like. Likewise, do you really think we have any accurate idea what the world will be like in 2100?

Can Industrial Emissions Be Good?

AT also provides [a] video about our CO2 famine. So assuming man's activities are elevating CO2 levels, a very serious question is raised. What if this is a good thing? What if industrial emissions are staving off CO2 deprivation's frightening

Things They Didn't Teach You In Church: Violence

by: Jim Brouillette
CCHW Real News HQ (Rumble and YouTube)
ChristChurchOfTheHolyWord.com

It seems like all my life no matter who was running, I have heard the claim that the election that was about to happen was the most important election in the history of our country. That always sounded like exaggerated rhetoric to me before, but this time I believe it may be true. At the time of this writing, we still have four days until the election. By the time you read this you will have a much clearer idea of where this country is headed than I do at this point. With that in mind, I want to discuss what the world will look like considering each outcome.

To be truthful, four days before the election I don't see any way Kamala Harris could legally be elected President, but what if she is? If that happens, at least 50% of the voting public will not accept the election as being legitimate. Harris has been on both sides of every important issue in this election. She was against fracking before she was for it and she has also had similar flip-flops on guns, free speech, a secure border, price controls, legalization of drugs, taxes, parents' rights, transgender surgery for prisoners, Biden's cognitive state, men playing in women's sports, and much more. Kamala will not talk about the fentanyl crisis killing our children, the invasion of our country by illegal aliens, how she plans to address the out-of-control inflation or anything else other than abortion. The democrats have nothing to run on except killing babies in their mothers' wombs.

We were told to shut up and just accept the outcomes of the 2020 and 2022 elections even though allegedly, Biden got more votes in 2020 than Obama, the most popular democrat ever and first black President! In Arizona, we were expected to believe republicans voted straight ticket on the down ballot candidates and issues but voted democrat for Governor and Senator in 2022. I don't believe that happened and I bet you don't believe it did either.

If Harris wins the 2024 election, I am worried about what will happen. I believe that the Uni-government planned and executed the January 6th fiasco, and that the Uni-government wanted a violent confrontation at the capital. Thank God, they didn't get it, or we would already be in the firm grip of a communist style lockdown today. One of the four Trump supporters that died that day was Ashli Babbitt. Ashli was an unarmed air force veteran who was shot point blank through the window in a locked door, by a capitol policeman on the other side. It was murder. I'm not sure the patriotic population of this country will be able to withstand the temptation to retaliate against a tyrannical government if the 2024 election is stolen. On the other hand, we have already seen what the left will do if Trump wins.

Violence is to be expected no matter who wins this election. The Bible speaks of violence in this world in many place. In the Book Genesis, chapter 6 verse 11 we are told: "The earth also was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence."

Violence will continue until Jesus returns to this world, God has told us to expect it, Psalms 58 is speaking of the wicked of this world: 2 Yea, in heart ye work wicked- ness; ye weigh the violence of your hands in the earth. 3 The wicked are estranged from the womb: they go astray as soon as they be born, speaking lies.

Remember the summer of love 2020? Remember police-free zones and defund the police, violent crowds and innocent people being shot, the BLM Movement and Antifa, race-baiting, looting, the burning of black-and-white-owned businesses and violence against black and white police and other innocent people? Well, buckle up because if Trump is elected, we will see it all again only next time it will be on steroids! I'm afraid no matter the outcome of this election things will get ugly.

The fact is, the political violence we see in the world today almost always goes one way (from the Left towards the Right). From the unbridled violence we saw in the big cities across this country to the attempted assassinations of politicians, judges and others over the past few years, only goes one way; radical leftist nutcases trying to kill republicans and others, including innocent children in schools.

So, we need to be ready for what is coming. It may not start immediately but it will come. The glaring contradiction here is that Christians believe in forgiveness and peaceful co-existence with non-believers - and make no mistake - the people perpetrating these acts of violence are definitely non-believers. They fall into the group of people described in Psalms 58. The question we need to answer as Christians is what are we going to do about it?

Will Christians (in this world of confusion and deception) be willing to stand up, take the heat, and confront the violence coming their way? Will Christians, in this environment of Wokeness and Social Media cancellations, be willing to stand up for what they know is right and against that which they know is wrong and evil? I'm not so sure. After all, we have already witnessed horrible atrocities against innocent people for political reasons. As I mentioned earlier Ashli Babbitt was shot and killed in cold blood, and nothing has happened to the shooter. Close advisors to President Trump (such as Steve Bannon and Peter Navarro) were jailed by the Biden-Harris administration's Department of Justice for contempt of Congress, because they would not break their silence about confidential communications with the President. These communications were protected by constitutional separation of powers. You can be sure of one thing; if they can do this to Bannon and Navarro they can and will do it to you.

What are you willing to do to protect the future of yourself and your family? What are you willing to do to protect this great country of ours? I believe all Christians should be praying about what is to come.

FBI Adjusting Old Crime Data to Make Current Numbers Look Better?

by Bob Adelman 11/01/2024
TheNewAmerican.com

Some say the FBI has been retroactively “adjusting” its statistics on gun-violence going back to 2005, perhaps to make current numbers look better. After the Bureau released its updated 2022-2023 data, analysts noticed that some of the earlier data had been revised upward.

Dean Weingarten explained the situation on ammoland.com. After reviewing the gun-violence data, he asked rhetorically, “What happened with the numbers in 2005? How do they hold steady for 13 years [from 2005], then suddenly expand by over a thousand murders for the year?”

Explanations for the FBI’s actions abound: Many police departments don’t report fully, so the agency must “estimate” the numbers of violent crimes committed in their area. Police department defunding has exacerbated the problem by allowing many crimes to go unreported. And many departments don’t count 911 calls, but only filed reports. For that to happen, the victims themselves must personally file a report with the department. For crimes less than murder or violence that results in hospitalization of the victim, the numbers become essentially worthless.

Political Issue

During Trump’s debate with Kamala Harris, he was “fact-checked” after he stated that crime increased under the Biden/Harris regime. The fact-checkers were wrong, because they used faulty numbers put out by the FBI. The Bureau has not corrected the numbers.

Initially the FBI reported that violent crime, relative to the population, had dropped by 2.1 percent in 2022 compared to a year earlier. Politicians and gun-control advocates chortled that the numbers dropped because of gun control under Biden. The Bureau quietly revised its statistics to show that gun violence that year actually increased by 4.5 percent, a grievous error of more than six percent. The revision was only caught by chance.

On October 16 RealClearInvestigations published John Lott’s revelation about the stealth revision, and this opened the eyes of an already-skeptical public as to the veracity and credibility of the FBI. He wrote: “When the FBI originally released the “final” crime data for 2022 in September 2023, it reported that the nation’s violent crime rate fell by 2.1%. This quickly became, and remains, a Democratic Party talking point to counter Donald Trump’s claims of soaring crime.” However, the FBI has quietly revised those numbers, releasing new data that shows violent crime increased in 2022 by 4.5%. The new data includes thousands more murders, rapes, robberies, and aggravated assaults.

The upward (or downward, if one considers the numbers from the victims’ point of view) revisions “are extensive,” said Lott: “The actual changes in crimes are extensive. The updated data for 2022 reports that there were 80,029 more violent crimes than in 2021. There were an additional 1,699 murders, 7,780 rapes, 33,459 robberies, and 37,091 aggravated assaults.” Then Lott asked, rhetorically, “Should the FBI’s 2023 numbers be believed?” Of course not.

The Real Numbers

But what are the real numbers? Isn’t there someone, anyone, out there tracking the real numbers of victims suffering under the Biden/Harris regime of defunding police, releasing criminals, and seemingly ignoring illegal immigrants who commit atrocities? Yes, there is. It’s the National Crime Victimization Survey, or NCVS, a program of the Bureau of Justice Statistics (BJS). From the BJS: “The BJS National Crime Victimization Survey (NCVS) is the nation’s primary source of information on criminal victimization.

Each year, data are obtained from a nationally representative sample of about 240,000 persons in about 150,000 households. Persons are interviewed on the frequency, characteristics, and consequences of criminal victimization in the United States.

The NCVS collects information on nonfatal personal crimes (i.e., rape or sexual assault, robbery, aggravated and simple assault, and personal larceny) and household property crimes (i.e., burglary/trespassing, motor vehicle theft, and other types of theft) both reported and not reported to the police. For each victimization incident, the NCVS collects information about the offender (e.g., age, race and Hispanic origin, sex, and victim-offender relationship), characteristics of the crime (e.g., time and place of occurrence, use of weapons, nature of the injury, and economic consequences), whether the crime was reported to police, reasons the crime was or was not reported, and victim experiences with the criminal justice system.”

What Lott Found

According to researcher and author John Lott, “While the FBI claims that serious violent crime has fallen by 5.8% since Biden took office, the NCVS numbers show that total violent crime has risen by 55.4%. Rapes are up by 42%, robbery by 63%, and aggravated assault by 55% during Biden’s term.

Since the NCVS started, the largest previous increase over three years was 27% in 2006, so the increase under Biden was slightly more than twice as large. The increases shown by the NCVS during the Biden-Harris administration are by far the largest percentage increases over any three years, slightly more than doubling the previous record.”

Americans Are Concerned

A Gallup poll showed that 92 percent of Republicans and 58 percent of Democrats thought crime was increasing. Rasmussen found that 61 percent of those polled thought crime was increasing, compared to just 13 percent who thought it wasn’t. Another Gallup poll from March of this year found that “crime and violence” was second only to inflation and rising prices among Americans’ concerns. But, as Lott noted, “the media and politicians used the inaccurate FBI data to try to convince people that they were wrong.”

It’s not just John Lott who blew the whistle on the FBI’s treachery. Professor David Mustard, who researches extensively on crime at the University of Georgia, called the FBI’s opacity “stunning”: “This FBI report is stunning because it now doesn’t state that violent crime in 2022 was much higher than it had previously reported, nor does it explain why the new rate is so much higher, and it issued no press release about this large revision.”

This lack of transparency harms the FBI’s credibility. It also proves presidential candidate Donald Trump was correct regarding the spike in violent crime during the Harris-Biden regime.

What You Need to Know About the World Economic Forum & the World Health Organization

StopWorldControl.com

The world's richest and most powerful gather at the World Economic Forum in Davos Switzerland. The founder of the WEF, Klaus Schwab, says proudly: "We are shaping the future of the world".

Their officially published plans include the following: tracking everything you do, buy, wear, and eat. Implement vaccine passports, which only allow you to participate in society if you continually take new booster injections. Limit the distance that you are allowed to go from your home to 10-20 minutes. Eliminate private ownership of cars and homes. Limit the buying of clothes to three sets per year. Reduce air travel to one short distance flight per year. Reduce human interaction as much as possible by making shopping, schooling, gathering, etc. online. Replace cash with digital currencies and limit how much money you can own and spend. Only allow information online that supports their agenda, and censor everything that criticizes them. Spray toxic chemicals in the atmosphere to block sunlight from reaching the earth, in order to prevent "global warming". Reduce your personal rights and freedoms for the "greater good". Eliminate all privacy, and install omnipresent surveillance systems, that will even record what you think and feel. Promote pedophilia as a natural sexual preference that must be included in society, and legalize sexual child abuse when the child "consents". Indoctrinate school children to surgically alter their sexual identity without the knowledge of their parents. Turn everyone into a cyborg, with multiple technological implants, connected to the cloud, from where A.I. will constantly monitor and control everyone. Replace doctors, lawyers, teachers, ministers, pastors, drivers, pilots, and dozens of other occupations with A.I. Allow managers to see what is going on inside the brains of their employees. Replace grass-fed beef with genetically engineered insects grown in factories and lab grown synthetic "meat". Convince the elderly to choose euthanasia so they don't burden the global economy and much, much more...

These are only some of their many insane plans for your future. Most of this is already in motion and the vast majority of humanity hasn't got the slightest clue about any of it. It is critical that you inform yourself.

The World Health Organization is being structured to be an unofficial but effective world dictatorship, whenever they declare a pandemic.

The updated International Health Regulations will obligate all the nations of the world to enact legislation that would think man is something apart from nature, an unnatural, alien agent inflicted upon the world. But whether you believe we're mere products of evolution — and hence just intelligent animals — or that we're divinely created, it comes out essentially the same: We're either part of nature or part of God's creation. We're as

be enacted that empower the military and police to impose quarantines, commandeer property and vehicles and require medical tests and treatments, including ongoing multiple injections.

The World Health Organization is an organization that operates outside of any democratic process. One of its primary financial benefactors is Bill Gates, who has no medical education whatsoever, yet he is promoted as the medical authority over the entire world. As the world's #1 vaccine dealer, his "health" advice is to continually inject everyone, which brings billions of dollars into his pockets. The WHO director general Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus also has no medical training, is no medical doctor, and has never treated any patient. Neither Gates nor Tedros are medical doctors, or even nurses for that matter, yet they dictate to millions of medical professionals worldwide what they can and cannot do. The Pandemic Treaty reveals evidence of how everything the World Health Organization does profits the pharmaceutical industry.

Article 18 of the proposed "Pandemic Treaty" enables the WHO to shut down every source of information that is not in line with what they want all of humanity to believe. This will mean the censoring of millions of experts from every field. Only the story spread by the World Health Organization will be allowed. Everything else will be labeled "disinformation". This will result in censorship similar to Nazi Germany or communist China.

People who are aware of the severe adverse events of vaccines (death, paralysis, stroke, brain injury, etc.), and therefore choose not to be injected with yet another cocktail of undisclosed substances, would be excluded from society. Laws could Ask yourself the following questions: do you want an undemocratic organization funded by a billionaire vaccine dealer to become the dictator over your life and over all of humanity? Do you want your elected officials to be puppets of this undemocratic organization? Do you want to be injected multiple times a year for the rest of your life, because Bill Gates says so? Do you want a world where millions of scientists and other experts are censored because they discuss the devastating adverse events of these injections?

Agenda 2030's 15-minute cages being built in the Netherlands

by: Rhoda Wilson 10/28/2024
expose-news.com

What does life look like in 15 minute cities that have already been realized in the Netherlands? How can we recognise the transformation of our cities into smart cities and, in particular, how can we prevent it? Dutch activist Maartje van den Berg discusses this in a recent interview with KLA.

Last week alternative news channel KLA interviewed Maartje van den Berg to discuss "smart cities" and "15-minute-cities" in Holland. "These so-called 'smart cities' and '15-minute cities' of ours [in The Netherlands] are being sold to us as being 'green' and 'healthy'. At the same time, people should live in their own neighborhoods and be happy being in them where everything is in their own surroundings and you don't need to go out. If you need a car, because they are made car-free zones, and if you need to go out [of your neighborhood] you'd better share a car with somebody else. They've made hubs outside cities where you can share a car or share bicycles," she said.

This is not only being planned, she explained, it is already being implemented in small towns and municipalities all over Holland. In 2025 (in three months) Amsterdam is going to be introducing "zero carbon emissions" zones. Where "diesel trucks and vans are not allowed to enter our cities," van den Berg said. At the same time, they are building hubs where shared cars will be stored and accessed.

Last year a vehicle-free zone was trialed in Amsterdam. For six weeks, the major road in Amsterdam was blocked with physical barriers to stop vehicles from entering or leaving Amsterdam. "A lot of people got really annoyed but also really alarmed because ambulances were not able to pass through and a lot of accidents happened," she explained. The municipality of Amsterdam had to concede that their pilot project using physical barriers to "make Amsterdam more 'green' and 'healthy'" had failed. So instead, the municipality decided to introduce an "intelligent entrance" into Amsterdam. "Intelligent entrance" means installing "License Plate Recognition (LPR) cameras," van den Berg said. LPR also known as Automatic Number Plate Recognition (ANPR), is an image-processing technology used to identify vehicles by their license plates. Over the years we have seen councils and local governments in several countries introducing ANPRs. "On 1 January 2025, 14 municipalities will introduce the 'zero carbon emissions' zones and [people will] get fined if they enter [these zones] with a diesel truck."

As van den Berg said, "the same thing is going in Germany with the cities. They [are] also introducing zero emission zones and they [are] doing the same in Belgium and France, and in Portugal and Spain ... The financing is coming from the European Union for all these programmes called Horizon 2020. ... and the Green Deal. All the [EU] governments signed the Green Deal ... so they're all applying these policies."

This year we have also seen Oxford City Council forge ahead with what they refer to as "bus gates." As in Amsterdam, Oxford also previously piloted physical barriers to create low-traffic neighborhoods (LTNs) which were met with protests from residents. London's Mayor Sadiq Khan has for years been attempting to implement his version of LTNs called Ultra Low Emission Zone (ULEZ) which has also been met with resistance. Also, the Isle of Man is planning to install ANPR at its entry and exit points.

At the same time that municipalities or local governments are installing cameras in Holland, they are removing parking spaces, van den Berg said. It is already difficult to find parking spaces but "by the end of 2025, 10,000 [parking] places [will be] removed ... and new parking permits are no longer being issued." It's not only driving privately owned vehicles that they are trying to control, if not abolish. Smart meters, for example, are being installed in people's homes, she said.

While rolling out tolls of surveillance, in preparation for switching from gas to electricity, the Dutch government is also building "transformer houses." "In the coming years, there are going to be 50,000 'transformer houses' being installed in residential areas," van den Berg said. "People don't like it." The electricity transformers are noisy and emit electromagnetic fields.

Previously all homes were powered by gas and the Netherlands was significantly impacted by the destruction of the Nord Stream Pipeline and, as with Germany, it affected the country's energy supply. Additionally, van den Berg said, "We had big gas fields in the north of Holland and they said they were going to close them and they have been closed."

Why would they do this when the gas supply was so obviously disrupted? "They want to make this transition, energy transition, towards electricity," she said, even though there is not enough electricity to supply the country's needs. "That's why we have ... areas without electricity supply. These wind turbines only give electricity when the wind is blowing and there is not always sun, very much so in the winter times. So, ["renewable" energy sources such as wind and solar] are not working out and people are realizing more and more that it is not a steady electricity grid." Because Holland is a relatively small land area, the wind turbines and large solar farms are close to people's homes. "A lot of people are warning about the health risks," she added. All over Holland data centers are being built, she said. "Google bought land to build their mega data center, in the north of Holland."

Not only is the "transition" to electric, digital and state surveillance an excellent control grid, we have to wonder if economies are deliberately being destroyed. Van den Berg agrees. "It is about wrecking the economy," she said. "That's what Agenda 2030 is about. It's about wrecking our economy... Because these 'transitions' like the digital transition, the energy transition, the smart cities, they're not working out and it is meant to wreck [the economy] because this is Agenda 2030 and The Great Reset."

There is a Dutch Government plan or roadmap called the 'National Strategy on Spatial Planning and the Environment'. Currently, it is a draft report. "It was written in 2021 during [the covid] lockdown," van den Berg said. "The report says that Holland is going to meet urgent social challenges such as climate warming and climate change, and we need to go to digital connectivity

Lake Havasu City Childhood Vaccine Fair Protest

On Saturday, November 2, the Havasu Medical Center held a four hour event called the Childhood Vaccine Fair. The Patriots in Lake Havasu decided to stage a protest, arriving at the 8:00 opening which had a helicopter to tour, a police van to tour, jump house, slide, face painting, and food. The patriots stationed themselves off the property on the public sidewalk.

Two of the officers did not waste time coming over to our staging area to warn us not to step on their property or put things on the brick wall. One of the officers was quite rude and yelled at us a warning that, "if we made one step on the property that we would be arrested for trespassing which is a crime."

(his words) The protesters questioned themselves of why police officers are endorsing and encouraging this private for-profit event. Were they being paid with taxpayer money? These are questions that we intend to find the answer to. For all the work the Medical Center did, we counted about possibly seven children at attendance at this four hour event. The protesters were about seven in number and at one point a father with two boys who were looking at the helicopter decided to come join us and the kids wanted to hold up signs. The father was in complete agreement, understanding the dangers of childhood vaccines.

The Patriots in Lake Havasu wanted to provide information to parents attending that childhood vaccines are dangerous, however, we were not allowed to converse with the extremely few parents who were there. Some of the results from these harmful vaccines with over 70 ingredients are autism, leukemia, cancer, weakened immune system, infertility, and many more. Some of the most harmful ingredients include formaldehyde and aluminum. The increase in the huge amount of ingredients has coincided with the increase of autism and and accessibility for all and housing, which is a really big problem for Holland. You see that our government [and] our municipalities are applying this new strategy plan, and this is where one of our hopes lies," she said. "Each local government or municipality had to write their own strategy for spatial planning and the environment. All these transitions and Agenda 2030 are in these new strategies. So, people can go to their Town Hall, together with local parties who serve our interests, and they can speak in the Town Hall and say, 'Listen, we don't want it, we don't want solar panels on our streets, we don't want transformer houses' and people are actually really doing it. They're going to their Town Halls."

There is also a significant citizen movement to use cash. Van den Berg explained, "We always say, 'Don't buy your food and drink at a supermarket, only pay cash and if you cannot pay cash - leave'. And say to the people, 'Please cash is also a valuable way of paying and you should allow it and we won't come back' ... it's really working out because a lot of places are letting people pay with cash more and more."

As well as reading their local government's strategy on special planning and the environment, van den Berg recommends people read Jacob Nordangård's book 'Rockefeller: Controlling the game' and Kees Van Der Pijl's book 'Pandemie van de angst: Opstap naar een totalitaire maatschappij?' ('Pandemic of Fear: A Step Towards a Totalitarian Society?'), which has been translated into English. Unfortunately, we were not able to find where the English translation can be purchased online.

Some Of Our Leaders Are Putting Other Countries First

by Rep. John J. Duncan Jr. 10/30/2024
RonPaulinstitute.org

Some of our leaders seem to care more about other countries, e.g., Ukraine and Israel, than they do about our own.

Once again, Ukraine's President Volodymyr Zelenskyy has come to Washington, begging for even more money, this time some $8 billion dollars. The U.S. Congress has already approved $175 billion for Ukraine in the last 2½ years. Added to over $52 billion from the European Union and $43 billion from the World Bank (17.5% of which comes from U.S. taxpayers), Ukraine has had more money to fight this war than Russia has.

The Kiel Institute said in mid-January Ukraine had at that point received from all sources what it described as a "staggering" $278 billion. Ukraine's total GDP in 2022 was only $160.5 billion. That whole country could have been rebuilt in a beautiful way with all the money it has spent on this war. Now, much of Ukraine has been shelled and bombed to smithereens all because many leaders from Britain and the U.S. urged Ukraine not to go through with a peace agreement in the spring of 2022. That agreement would have saved thousands of lives on both sides and hundreds of billions of dollars.

Four big U.S. defense contractors threw a lavish party at the Ukrainian Embassy in Washington in December 2022 in celebration of all the money they would be receiving as long as all the members of Congress (to whom they contribute) could keep this war going. One publication headlined its story as "This DC party invite shows all the money to be made off the Ukraine War." As General Smedley Butler said many years ago: "War is a racket."

Our encouragement of this war broke what Secretary of State James Baker called an "ironclad" promise to Russia in 2012 that we would not seek to expand NATO further east, meaning through Ukraine to the Russian border. On September 25, the U.S. announced another $375 million aid package for Ukraine from defense discretionary funds as President Biden pledged "unwavering support." Vice President Harris, trying to appear tough, attacked Trump on Ukraine, saying his position amounts to "surrender."

As for Israel, the 58 standing ovations Netanyahu received in Congress in July showed that the country will continue to receive many billions no matter what it does. According to the Council on Foreign Relations, Israel has received at least $310 billion in economic and military assistance from U.S. taxpayers since its founding in 1948, making it the largest recipient – by far – of our foreign aid.

In addition, Egypt, Jordan, and some other countries in the Middle East have received many billions from the U.S., really as bribes so they would not team up with Iran in a coalition against Israel. One major example of our aid is the U.S.-funded "Iron Dome" which has been almost totally effective against the rockets being shot at Israel from Gaza, the West Bank, Lebanon and other places. This Dome is why, fortunately, very few Israelis have been killed by these weapons of war, while, unfortunately, many thousands of Palestinians, and now Lebanese, have been and are being killed by Israel's bombs.

Most of the victims of these Israeli and U.S.-financed bombs have been women and children. If so many thousands of little children were being killed by these bombing raids in any other country, there would have been such a rush by members of Congress to condemn it that it would have been hard to get out of the way of the stampede. However, all members of Congress know they can criticize any other country – even our own – but not Israel. Sadly, re-election comes before country to most members of Congress, so they know they have to jump at Israel's beck and call.

Despite all the billions we have sent Israel over the years and despite always voting with them against the rest of the world in the U.N., Netanyahu has totally ignored our pleas for a ceasefire. He controls our foreign policy in the Middle East. Our president, secretary of state and other leaders have been made to look very weak, even ridiculous, when we demand a ceasefire and yet at the same time keep sending Israel many billions more in military weapons and equipment. Possibly the most ridiculous thing of all is that with a national debt of over $35 trillion, we are spending money we do not have to support wars by both Ukraine and Israel that are very harmful to our own national interests.

Our one-sided attachment to and for Israel has caused much resentment for the U.S. around the world and especially in the Middle East. There will never be peace there unless the U.S. becomes a neutral mediator and Israel is forced to make peace with its neighbors and our wasteful spending in Ukraine is doing much more harm than good. These wars are not about any serious threat to us. They have simply been and still are all about the money.

Thoughtcrime: UK Veteran Convicted for Praying SILENTLY Near Abortion Mill

by Selwyn Duke 10/28/2024
TheNewAmerican.com

Not long ago, France made abortion a “constitutional right.” Britain hasn’t followed suit, but it can’t because it doesn’t have a constitution. In a way, however, it’s going France but one better (read: worse). Its government has just convicted a veteran and father of two for praying silently near an abortion “clinic.” The kicker: The court finding him guilty reasoned that his prayer constituted “disapproval of abortion.” Apparently, prenatal infanticide is now considered a sacrament in Britain — while praying is a sin.

1984 in 2024

Reason [MSN] reports on the story, writing: “In Britain, it can be a crime to think the wrong thoughts in the wrong place. It sounds absurd—not to mention Orwellian—but a handful of people have been arrested or charged in the country simply for praying silently near abortion clinics.

This month, a British man was convicted of criminal charges for praying silently near an abortion clinic. The man, Adam Smith-Connor did not attempt to harass, intimidate, or interact in any way with those entering the clinic. Instead, he wordlessly prayed with his head bowed slightly. He wasn’t even on clinic property—he was outside the sightline of the clinic itself, according to the Alliance Defending Freedom (ADF), a religious freedom group.

As a result, Smith-Connor was questioned by police and later charged with violating a Public Spaces Protection Order (PSPO), a broad censorship order enabled by the 2014 Anti-Social Behaviour, Crime and Policing Act. Under this law, local authorities can obtain special status for some public places, allowing them to ban a huge range of conduct. In the name of limiting “anti-social behavior,” British towns have obtained PSPOs to ban the homeless from sleeping outside or to ban swearing.

Several cities have used this law to place “buffer zones” around local abortion clinics. The PSPO in Smith-Connor’s case not only banned “intimidating or harassing” those working at or seeking services from the clinic but also barred individuals from engaging in “prayer,” “[sprinkling] holy water on the ground,” and “[crossing] themselves.”

Double Standards

It’s hard to imagine any left-wing protesters, of which there are many, being thus treated for engaging in silent demonstration. (Though “silent left-wing protest” is an oxymoron.) Mainstream media such as CNN have complained this year about U.K. Just Stop Oil protesters being given “harsh” prison sentences for, quote, “non-violent” or “peaceful” demonstrations. However, in this they demonstrate warped judgment. The greentopian activists were convicted because they brought a major highway’s “traffic to a standstill in parts over four days in November 2022,” as CNN admits. They have no right to block traffic — no more than the government has a right to try to block thoughts.

Truth Stranger Than Fiction

Smith-Connor’s case gets more bizarre still, though. Just consider that, as the Daily Caller writes, “he was interrogated about “the nature of his prayers,” the legal group [ADF] stated in its press release. Now, Smith-Connor has been sentenced to a “conditional discharge” and must pay prosecution fees of 9,000 euros. The court concluded that Smith-Connor’s prayer constituted a “disapproval of abortion.”

He was charged by the Christchurch & Poole Council under the Public Spaces Protection Order, which prohibits acts of “approval/disapproval” relating to abortion services, including “prayer or counseling.” The 2023 Public Order created “buffer zones” around abortion facilities in England and Wales, according to the ADF.”

The oppression will get worse, too, starting October 31. It then will become “illegal for anyone to do anything that intentionally ... influences” someone’s abortion decision, the U.K. government’s website informs. Also prohibited is causing “distress to someone using or working at these premises... The law will apply within a 150 metre radius of the abortion service provider,” the government adds.

So now, apparently, even saying “Have your baby; you’ll love him more than you know” could be illegal. It’s “influence,” right and “distress”? That’s completely subjective. “He was wearing a cross around his neck, judge, and looked at me with pity — I felt distressed.” What are the consequences? “Anyone found guilty of breaking the law will face an unlimited fine,” the government adds. Yes, well, it’s always convenient if you can impoverish (defund) your political opponents while “enforcing the law.”

The Issue Behind the Issue

Abortuary buffer-zone laws exist in the U.S., too. (The Supreme Court may soon consider their constitutionality.) But why the uber-sensitivity about prenatal-infanticide mills? Why the special carve-out for them? Could it be that those procuring abortions generally know in their hearts that the act is profoundly evil? Could it be that because of this, even the slightest questioning of their decision brings these feelings to the surface? That certainly would be “distress.”

Interestingly, commentator Olivia Murray wrote about women’s “feelings” on abortion this week. Even “though pro-abortion women vote for abortion, when faced with their own pregnancy, they face serious doubts about procuring the procedure for themselves,” she stated. “They want to keep their baby.”

Oh, they may end up making the “rash, self-destructive decision” to “murder their own child(ren),” Murray later adds. They are, however, “totally screwed up by it.” The point is that, without a doubt, intense inner conflict is operative here. Add to this that “women are emotional creatures,” as Murray also puts it, and it makes sense. First, the aforementioned U.K. government website page was created by two left-wing female ministers (Britain has many women officeholders). Moreover, perhaps exhibiting a perversion of chivalry, many men want to protect abortion-seeking women’s “feelings.” The fairer sex is sensitive, you know. So you don’t tell them they’re fat — and you don’t say aborting their child is wrong. You don’t even intimate it and you don’t pray about it, either. Of course, though, there’s one thing none of this can change — the Truth.

Scientists Just Captured The Flash of Light That Sparks When a Sperm Meets an Egg

by: BEC Crew 04/27/2016
www.sciencealert.com

For the first time ever, scientists have captured images of the flash of light that sparks at the very moment a human sperm cell makes contact with an egg.

The phenomenon has been observed in animals before, but no one's ever seen the spark of human conception. What's even more incredible is the fact that some eggs burn brighter than others, which is a direct indication of their ability to develop into a healthy embryo, a team from Northwestern University found.

So why do sparks literally fly at the moment of conception? Back in 2011, the Northwestern team discovered that sparks of zinc exploded at the point of conception in mice. It took them a few years to figure out how to image this event, but by 2014, they'd managed to film the event for the first time ever, and watched as billions of zinc atoms were released at the exact moment when a mammal's egg is pierced by a sperm cell.

Using a new fluorescent sensor that's able to track the movements of zinc in live cells, the team caught a glimpse of an egg's zinc-storage capabilities, and found some 8,000 zinc compartments, each one containing around 1 million zinc atoms, just ripe for exploding. The tiny 'fireworks' that result were found to last for about 2 hours after fertilization.

Now, the same team has managed to film this event occurring in a human egg at the point of conception. "It was remarkable," says one of the team, Teresa Woodruff. "We discovered the zinc spark just five years ago in the mouse, and to see the zinc radiate out in a burst from each human egg was breathtaking."

"This is an important discovery because it may give us a non-invasive and easily visible way to assess the health of an egg and eventually an embryo before implantation," says one of the researchers, Eve Feinberg. "There are no tools currently available that tell us if it's a good quality egg," she adds. "Often we don't know whether the egg or embryo is truly viable until we see if a pregnancy ensues. That's the reason this is so transformative. If we have the ability up front to see what is a good egg and what's not, it will help us know which embryo to transfer, avoid a lot of heartache, and achieve pregnancy much more quickly."

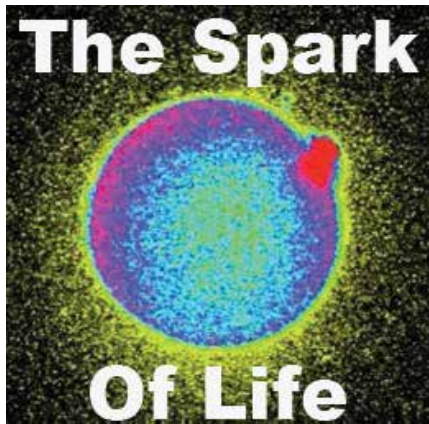

For the experiment, the team used a sperm enzyme to activate the egg (fertilising the egg with actual sperm for research purposes is illegal under US federal law) and watched as the event triggered calcium levels to rise inside the egg, which prompted the release of zinc. "As the zinc shoots out, it binds to small molecules which emit a fluorescence which can be picked up by camera microscopes," Sarah Knapton explains for The Telegraph.

So why is zinc so special? The researchers found that eggs compartmentalize and distribute zinc to control the development of a healthy embryo - the mineral plays a vital role in controlling the 'decision' the egg makes to grow into an embryo - so the more zinc that's released, the brighter the flash, and the more viable the egg. "The egg first has to stockpile zinc and then must release some of the zinc to successfully navigate maturation, fertilization, and the start of embryogenesis," said one of the team, Thomas O'Halloran, back in 2014. "But exactly how much zinc is involved in this remarkable process and where is it in the cell?" This is hopefully a question the researchers are now equipped to answer, and we can't wait to see what they discover next.

The results have been published in Scientific Reports www.nature.com.

What Does the World Say?

According to PEW Trust Magazine (May 27, 2022), "The future of liberal democracy has come into question."

As democratic nations have wrestled with economic, social, and geopolitical upheaval in recent years, the future of liberal democracy has come into question. In countries across the globe, democratic norms and civil liberties have deteriorated, while populists have enjoyed surprising success at the ballot box. Newly democratic nations have struggled while more-established, once self-assured democracies have stumbled, exposing long-simmering weaknesses in their social fabrics and institutional designs.

In addition, 2019 Pew Research Center survey found that 70% of teenagers said anxiety and depression were major problems for people their age—topping a list of concerns that also included bullying, drugs, alcohol, poverty, and teen pregnancy. The pandemic has only intensified the discussion around Americans and mental health.

What Does the Bible Say?

Philippians 4:6-7

Be anxious for nothing, but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known to God. [7] And the peace of God, which surpasses all comprehension, will guard your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus.

John 14:27

"Peace I leave with you; My peace I give to you; not as the world gives do I give to you. Do not let your heart be troubled, nor let it be fearful."

Psalms 55:22

Cast your burden upon the LORD and He will sustain you; He will never allow the righteous to be shaken.

Matthew 6:34

"So do not worry about tomorrow; for tomorrow will care for itself. Each day has enough trouble of its own."

Matthew 6:9-10

"Pray, then, in this way: 'Our Father who is in heaven, Hallowed be Your name. [10] Your kingdom come. Your will be done, On earth as it is in heaven.'
