FEAR – The Ultimate Weapon of Control

I once came across the following statement, fear is faith in evil. I confess that at the time, I did not quite grasp the depth nor the overwhelming truth in the statement but life, however, has led me to understand it. You will think me crazy when I say that the chaos, the division, the suffering and the unhappiness that we see unfolding in the world today stem from one fundamental choice that humanity keeps making, a choice to align itself with one emotional force over another. That is the truth at the core of the problem.

There are two primal emotional forces that govern human consciousness. One elevates, unifies and brings coherence, harmony and order. The other constricts, distorts, fractures and creates confusion and chaos. The first one could be described as the force that expands consciousness, whilst the other is the force that constructs it. One is the building block with which the universe was created. The other is the fuel that feeds an illusionary matrix designed to keep us divided, distracted and subdued.

Logic would suggest that humanity would naturally choose the force that leads to clarity, harmony and freedom. Yet, the uncomfortable truth is that we mostly operate under the influence of the darker one. So what are these two emotional forces from which everything else stems from? The first one, you may have guessed, is love. Love in the greater, grander scheme of things, not just in the romantic sense, but love as the force that infuses everything with divine energy.

Love as the coding language of this universe. Love as the expression of God within us and around us.

The other one, on the other hand, is the plague that has infected humanity into submission, compliance, self loathing, disempowerment and what is beginning to look like self extermination. It is the ultimate weapon of control, fear. Through fear, humanity has subjugated to a system of enslavement in exchange for a false sense of security. We have turned our backs to the truth about ourselves and instead live in a constant state of confusion, anxiety and inner conflict, which is shutting down our consciousness.

Human consciousness expresses itself through three fundamental aspects: thought, emotion and action. When there is unity of consciousness, when our thoughts, our feelings and actions are in alignment, when we think and feel and do what is right, there is no internal conflict, no antagonism. There is instead, self respect, self governance, or what we might rightly call sovereignty. However, when this unity of consciousness is broken, when we don’t do what we know to be right, what we know to be moral, for fear of the consequences, we are betraying our spirit. We are turning against the inner compass that guides us. We are acting in opposition to our true self.

In Hebrew, the word Shatan or Satan, means to oppose. Satan is the eternal opposer, the antagonist, the Nemesis within ourselves. So when we live in opposition, when we act in misalignment with our higher nature, guess who we have invited into our soul? The phrase fear is faith in evil suddenly begins to make sense. Just like a parasite can take hold of an organism without an immune system. Fear has taken hold of an entire generation devoid of courage, and evil (as we are witnessing) has taken root. We have become a society of cowards, afraid of absolutely everything. We’re afraid of what others may think, of not fitting in, of standing up and of being truthful. We’re afraid of climate, of viruses, of aging and of death. We’re afraid of dreaming, of daring, of trying, of failing, of hurting and of pain. But nothing was ever achieved without the courage to act despite fear, nothing was created, nothing was discovered, nothing was overcome, ever without defying fear.

Letter from the Editor

by: Leesa Bolden, LAC
TFPP Editor in Chief

The snow bird season has all but come to an end and all of our winter friends have gone or are traveling home. God please be with them as they travel and keep them safe. We look forward to your return next winter.

As we witness what is happening in the middle east, we must all remember that all lives are precious. No one is better than nor superior to another. Our Nation was built upon Christian values and as Christians we must strive to live a Christ-like life and continue to ask ourselves, "What would Jesus do?" He is a loving God, not a vengeful God. We must pray that His light shines upon the hearts of our enemies, our leaders and our military so that they will make decisions as Jesus did.

As the editor of this paper, it is not my job to make you nor my advertisers happy, although I appreciate each one. My job is to help you think critically. Remember as you read this paper, if you get angry and triggered, that this is an opportunity for you to reflect on why you feel this way. If you do not agree with what is said, look inside yourself and question from where did your thoughts originate? Have you been influenced by the media, your family, your pastors, Q, or President Trump and his team? Question them, for this is the only way you will ever find what is true in your heart.

As humans, we want to believe that what "they" tell us is the truth. You want to believe that what you read in this paper is the truth. While I try to make certain that every article is factual, I too am human and get fooled by others. Some of the articles are simply an author's opinion that invoked a feeling within me that I had to examine carefully to explore why I was having a visceral response to it. I pray that you will also explore your feelings and ask yourself "What if the author is correct?" Will you allow cognitive dissonance to simply reject the information or will you try and understand the point of view from which they come?

I hope that you will go to our website and explore the extra articles and videos we have provided to begin to unravel our belief systems and educate yourself based on new information. We have included a video of former Church of Sweden Pastor Helena Edlund who warns the U.S. that Christianity and freedom are inseparable, and if you lose one, you will lose the other. There is an article about Carrie Prejean Boller, a Catholic conservative, who was removed from President Donald Trump's Religious Liberty Commission on February 11th following a contentious public hearing on antisemitism. She openly questioned whether Catholicism's refusal to affirm Zionism constitutes "antisemitism" — a reference to the position articulated in 1904 by Pope Pius X, according to Zionism's founder, Theodor Herzl. There is also a copy of the complaint of judicial misconduct against La Paz County Pro Tem Justice of the Peace James Putz-Artrup regarding the judicial rulings and actions taken against Mike Roth, Quartzsite resident.

Please share the articles with those who would enjoy it or simply need to think more critically. With an online subscription you can share via email. It's super easy and only $24/year for the digital version and only $59/year for digital plus a mailed hard copy. Discounts available for larger quantities, contact us, we are happy to assist your efforts.

Love you all. God Bless America. Keep praying that the truth continues to emerge and that God's light extinguishes all of the darkness in the hearts of those wanting to rule over us. God bless and protect us all!

An all-out WAR between Richard Selph and

591 Olive Lake Blvd. Blythe, Ca 92225

Wynona Ragland had the crowd roaring lap after lap! Late-race contact sent both into the outside wall—but out of the chaos, Ryan Selph stormed through to capture his FIRST WIN of the season! Shelby Deckers followed close behind in an unforgettable finish. Most importantly, all drivers are okay.

make this happen: Ace Hardware, Ramsey Towing, Blythe Fire Department, the Prime Leaf, The Patriot Free Press, Camp Out, and Reliable Banner.

Don't miss the next race - support your local racetrack and bring a friend!

Pony Stocks:

Total domination by David Jones #33Y! He held strong against pressure from Leonard Manos until a hard incident took Manos out of contention—locking in a huge victory for Jones!

Factory Stocks:

From green to checkered, Derek King #01 was untouchable, leading every lap! Brandon Jones #6 powered his way into second after mechanical trouble sidelined Enzo Decker, while Ashley Garrett drove strong to claim third.

The Vibe:

Fast cars, roaring engines, spirited grandstands, and a lively hula hoop contest had both kids and adults laughing and competing, bringing the island energy all night long!

FEAR – The Ultimate Weapon of Control

So let's face fear as the wake up call, as the trigger that will finally force us to remember who we are. For the only path out of fear is the path to self-realization, as Socrates so simply and profoundly put it, know thyself. The strength and the courage required to confront fear comes from understanding our true nature through knowledge and introspection. It comes from stepping into higher awareness and living in alignment with the principles of creation.

So long as we believe that there is no underlying intelligence that governs creation, so long as we subscribe to the notion of a random, purposeless universe, so long as we think what our senses perceive is all there is. So long as we follow dogma instead of reason. So long as we operate through intellect, divorced from intuition, materialism, devoid of spirituality, logic, empty of imagination and the absurd notion that morality is relative, we will continue to succumb to fear in the ignorance about who we are, what is true, what is right and what is moral.

Humanity suffers from a severe case of cognitive dissonance, a willful denial of reality and a refusal to accept what is true in favor of what is false. Why is there such a lack of courage, you may ask? Because there is a lack of knowledge, a lack of wisdom and a lack of truth. We look outside of ourselves for the enemy, and we give it names, people, organizations, secret societies, cults, religions, nations, you name it. But whatever shape or form it takes, all it does is promote, instigate and spread fear.

The controllers of this world are the controllers of fear. We need not fight them. We need to fight the fear within. Humanity has one enemy. It has one battle to fight, and it's an internal battle. Nobody can fight it for you. You are either the hero or the victim in this war, and it's up to you to decide, only you can choose to stand in love or in fear, in alignment with your greater self, or in submission to the chaos and confusion that comes from surrendering to the notion that you are less than what you truly are, that you are matter instead of spirit, that you are mortal instead of eternal, that you are worldly instead of divine.

We say we want freedom, but freedom is not possible in a society that ignores the truth and abandons morality. Freedom is the God given ability to do what is objectively right and good. It is not the license to do whatever you want, at least not without consequences. The lack of understanding of this fundamental truth is the reason humanity has had to endure so much suffering. This is the truth that will set you free. Until we understand that freedom and morality are directly proportional, we will continue to walk down the path of tyranny and slavery.

In the words of Peter Marshall, may we think of freedom not as the right to do as we please, but as the opportunity to do what is right. A very special soul once walked this earth to try and teach us how to be free. He led by example and personally waged a spiritual war against the same forces of control that continue to enslave us. He opposed the organized religious order of the day, he fought the money changers at the temple, and was finally persecuted and killed by the state. Effectively, he stood against the three mind control systems that we're still trying to free ourselves from, institutionalized religion, the financial system and government.

Jesus Christ did not believe in the authority of man over man. He came to teach us that the only way of having true freedom was for man to live in accordance and harmony with God's law. 2000 years later, humanity has still not learned the lesson. I live in the hope, however, that perhaps the Great Awakening that we are witnessing might be the moment a penny finally drops.

Life was not designed to be scary. It was not designed to keep us in perpetual fear. Life is simply a chance for consciousness, which is ultimately what we are to have an individuated physical experience. The phrase, "Don't be afraid" is one of the most prevalent in scripture. Jesus repeatedly asks his disciples, "Why are you afraid?" Fear only crept in when we forgot who we are, where we come from, and why we're here. The controllers of the world have used our ignorance to promote fear as the most effective method of mind control. They have led us down the road of materialism, hedonism, atheism, nihilism, scientism, feminism, wokeism, fascism, communism, and most recently, transhumanism, because eventually all of it leads to totalitarianism, thanks to today's technology, to technocratic Neo feudalism, the New World Order of slavery.

The concept of a single ruler was simply replaced by the model of a ruling class. We went from monarchy to what now looks like a corporate oligarchy, but the concept is the same rulers and subjects. Subjects being the appropriate word for we are indeed subjects to the indoctrination and mind control at the hands of the education and media industrial complex. We are subjects to the genetic manipulation at the hands of the pharmaceutical industrial complex. We are subject to the eternal conflicts of wars at the hands of the military industrial complex. The Matrix has all the structures of control in place. The machinery is well oiled. All they need is to keep us in ignorance and in fear.

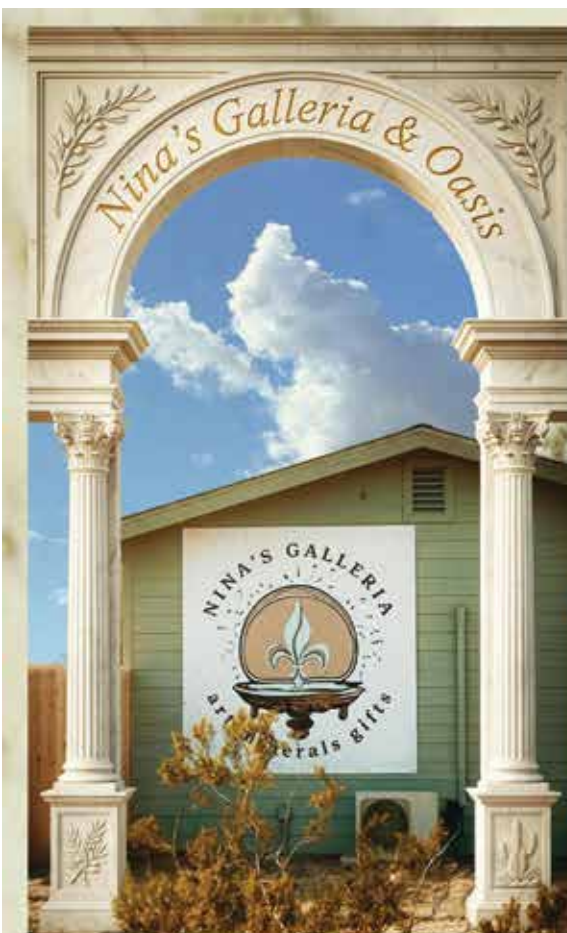

So humanity continues to safely and effectively walk towards its own demise, hypnotically following the Pied Piper's tune of deceit, disempowerment and self denigration. A question remains, how long will we continue to subjugate to fear? When will we overcome the barriers to self-realization so that we can finally come to understand our spiritual nature, our creative power and our higher purpose?

The control and slavery system is actually about the limitation of Free Will through the destruction of possibility, the indoctrination runs so deep in our psyche, we are so attached to institutionalized belief systems that we can no longer even imagine the possibility of true freedom. Like an animal that was born into captivity and no longer has the ability to imagine life outside of the cage. It's time we switch from slave mentality to becoming the rulers of our own kingdom, the kingdom of self. Let's stop abdicating personal responsibility to others. Let's hold the reins of our own destiny. Let's defy fear by choosing love every step of the way, and let's use our imagination to envision where we want to go before we end up where we wish we'd never been.

Fear is not only faith in evil. Fear is placing your bets on Satan instead of God, on chaos instead of order, on conflict instead of harmony, and on slavery instead of freedom. Fear is lack of love, just like darkness is lack of light. So, the next time fear is infecting your thoughts and pushing you to make decisions in opposition to your higher self, take a moment to reflect and ask yourself, Who am I betting on? Fear or Love, Satan or God? It's about time we make the right choice. Thank you.

FBI Blocked Probe Into Possible Foreign Role in Charlie Kirk Assassination, Says Joe Kent

By Paul Dragu March 20, 2026
TheNewAmeican.com

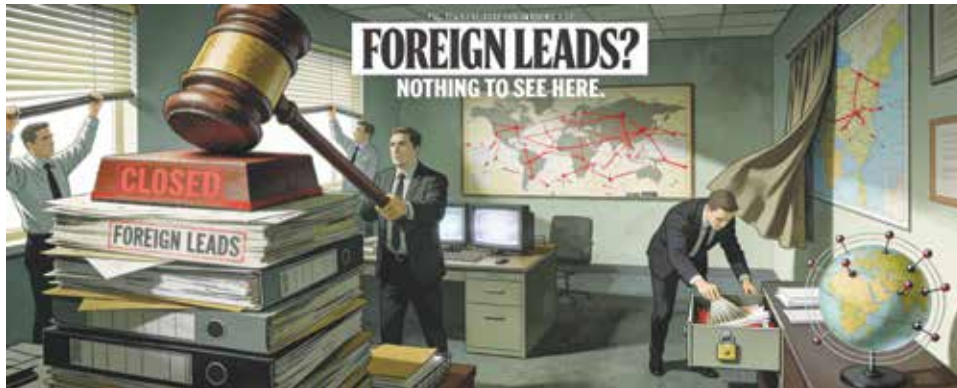

Tucker Carlson’s interview with the former director of the National Counterterrorism Center, Joe Kent, has ignited a whirlwind of controversy. Kent resigned early this week, publicized his resignation letter on social media, and shortly afterward appeared on one of the most popular podcasts for a two-hour interview. Carlson’s episode with Kent has garnered 6.5 million views just on X and YouTube. In addition, there are downloads through Spotify and Apple, where Carlson’s show consistently ranks in the top five.

Most of the frenzy stems from Kent accusing Israel of employing deceptive tactics to essentially bamboozle President Donald Trump into starting a war with Iran. But he also made alarming comments about the FBI blocking his former agency from following up on foreign leads tied to the assassination of Charlie Kirk. In the interview, Kent carefully walked a line of suspicion and caution.

Prevented From Following Leads
“You believe there was reason to investigate foreign ties to Charlie Kirk’s murder and were told by the ... FBI and DOJ — ‘No, you’re not allowed to investigate that?’” Carlson asked Kent. “They basically cut off our access to be able to get into that information,” Kent responded. The former federal intelligence chief repeatedly emphasized that he wasn’t saying he was convinced of a foreign element in Kirk’s assassination, only that his agency was prevented from following leads he thought were worth pursuing. “We still had a lot more leads to run down that pertain to some kind of a foreign nexus that we were stopped from investigating,” he said.

Kent said his former agency was told that Tyler Robinson was a lone gunman and to leave the case alone. “And maybe he is,” Kent added, “there were data points that we needed to investigate. ... There was still a lot for us to look into that I can’t really get into. But there was still linkage for us to investigate that we needed to run down. I’m not making any conclusions. ... I’m just saying there’s unanswered questions.”

The task of the National Counterterrorism Center (NCC) is to investigate foreign ties to crimes in the United States, to investigate potential acts of terrorism. “If we don’t find any foreign ties, we back off,” Kent said. “What I’m saying without getting into too much detail is there was more for us to investigate.”

He said his agency’s access to the case files was cut off early. He also said that they were prohibited from sending people to the scene of the crime to gather information: “After the crisis period, the first week or so ... we basically were told that, ‘Hey, we’ll get back to you if we find any kind of foreign ties, etc., that we want you guys to look into. Meanwhile, we had already dug up a decent amount of leads. Again, I’m not saying that we had anything concrete, but we found more work that we needed to do to say that we had done our due diligence. We were then told, ‘Hey, you guys need to stop. You can’t work on this anymore.’”

Requests Not Fulfilled

What followed was a “bureaucratic dispute,” according to Kent. The NCC was officially allowed back on the case later. But it didn’t take long before their work was hampered again, this time in more subtle ways. Kent said that neither the FBI nor Utah authorities met their data requests: “They didn’t ever officially come back and say, ‘You can’t look at this, anymore.’” All of the requests just continued to die on the vine with the various agencies that we needed to actually fulfill those requests.”

Kent acknowledged the perspective of the FBI. They blocked his investigation because they wanted to turn everything over to Utah state authorities. Their stated reason was to prevent interference into local law enforcement efforts and into Robinson’s trial. Moreover, as far as the FBI is concerned, the evidence against Robinson is overwhelming, Kent said.

Reports from back in October, when news broke of this probe being blocked, echo what Kent told Carlson. “[FBI Director Kash] Patel and other senior officials believed Mr. Kent was overstepping, treading on F.B.I. responsibilities and potentially interfering with the investigation and the prosecution of the suspect,” The New York Times reported. They added: “While Mr. Robinson is currently facing only state charges, some administration officials were concerned that Mr. Kent’s efforts could provide fodder to defense lawyers, who could use the notion that

Weingarten Calls for WEF Involvement in U.S. Curriculum

By Rebecca Terrell, March 26, 2026
TheNewAmerican.com

A March 9 video clip of American Federation of Teachers (AFT) President Randi Weingarten speaking at a World Economic Forum (WEF) panel showcased her advocating for the organization’s role in shaping educational curricula in America. In the footage, Weingarten discusses partnerships between education, labor, government, and industry to create “pathways” for students post-high school or college, emphasizing the need for integrated curricula. She specifically asks, “How do [we] use the WEF to create this kind of integrated network so that we’re all working together” to ensure opportunities for living-wage jobs in sectors such as advanced manufacturing?

In July 2025, she announced the American Federation of Teachers’ partnership with the WEF to develop a manufacturing curriculum aimed at preparing one million young people for supply-chain roles by 2035. The “SmartStart USA” program, launched in collaboration with governors, industry leaders, and educators, focuses on industry-aligned skills, hands-on experience, and certifications. Weingarten has framed this as essential for bridging education and workforce needs, but critics argue it invites international bodies to standardize U.S. schooling, prioritizing globalism over national interests.

Randi Weingarten
The Gates Foundation’s Role
Weingarten’s comments are right out of the textbook for homogenized global education, reminiscent of efforts such as the controversial Common Core State Standards (CCSS), initiated in the United States in 2008. Funded heavily by the Bill &

Melinda Gates Foundation — with more than $200 million invested — Common Core aimed to establish uniform benchmarks in math and English. It had been adopted by 45 states and the District of Columbia by 2012. Gates championed it under the pretext of ensuring “college- and career-ready” standards, arguing it would facilitate innovation and mobility. However, it insults national histories and cultural values as “parochial,” and instead fosters the “global citizen” mindset of Agenda 2030’s Sustainable Development Goal 4.7. The aim also aligns with international assessments such as the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development’s (OECD) Programme for International Student Assessment (PISA).

Gates’ foundation has supported global education initiatives through the UN Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) and OECD, blatantly promoting fabricated “competency” standards in areas such as sustainability and equity. (Whatever happened to the three R’s?) The overarching goal was to have all students of the world learning standardized content — e.g., shared narratives on climate change or globalization — designed to erode cultural distinctions via a uniform planetary curriculum. Weingarten, who endorsed Common Core early on, shares this bias, and the American Federation of Teachers supported its implementation. Her recent WEF advocacy continues this trajectory, as seen in AFT’s “National Academy for AI Instruction” with tech giants such as Microsoft and OpenAI.

Global Citizens in a One-world Government

While proponents argue such standardization prepares youth for an interconnected world, the real goal is the formation of “global citizens” and the “world republic,” which Francis Bacon articulated in his book The New Atlantis in 1627. This utopian vision of a borderless, one-world government has had surprising tenacity throughout the centuries, first emerging in the Rosicrucian circles that Bacon trafficked in, then passing to the Fabian socialists of England in the 19th century, and on to the architects of the United Nations in the 20th century. H.G. Wells (himself a Fabian socialist) openly wrote about this “world republic,” and would doubtless be pleased that Randi Weingarten and the World Economic Forum are intent on realizing Bacon’s dream of a borderless, knowledge-driven technocracy.

more than one person was involved in Mr. Kirk’s killing to raise reasonable doubt in the minds of jurors, said those aware of the matter.”

Critics and Supporters

The Times noted that Patel was “troubled” that Kent went through FBI material on the Kirk assassination. There was even a White House meeting to discuss what he did. According to the paper, the meeting was attended by Patel, top Justice Department officials, Vice President J.D. Vance, White House Chief of Staff Susie Wiles, Kent himself, and Kent’s then-boss, Director of National Intelligence Tulsi Gabbard.

Kent also had his supporters, who said he was simply doing his job, “running down leads and making sure no foreign or domestic groups were linked to Mr. Kirk’s death.” Kent’s comments about the Kirk investigation, like those about the Iran war, have drawn support as well as smears. We decided to publish what he said because there is journalistic value in what the former head of a major federal intel agency that was somewhat involved in the Kirk investigation says. Reporting what an official says is also not equivalent to an endorsement. It’s simply a report. And while Kent is under FBI investigation and accused of leaking to the media, that does not mean what he says is not newsworthy, especially given his clean past. On that same note, given the FBI’s troubling long history of corruption, their investigation into someone is far from an indication of guilt.

It’s also important to keep in mind that Kent wasn’t fired — he resigned. Note also that the attacks against him didn’t emerge until after he resigned and publicized his reason for doing so. Moreover, Kent is a decorated combat veteran. He completed 11 combat tours in the Middle East. He has earned, among other awards, the Bronze Star Medal, the Army Commendation Medal, the Army Achievement Medal, and the Combat Infantryman Badge. There is more reason to take him seriously than not.

Pete Hegseth's Christianity Is Not the Christianity of the Bible

~ Opinion ~ By Chuck Baldwin
ChuckBaldwinLive.com 03/27/26

For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal [fleshly]. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood. ~ The Apostle Paul

Secretary of Defense Pete Hegseth sees himself as a crusader. He calls himself a Christian. He believes his faith instructs him to “kill the infidels.” As did the crusaders in the Middle Ages, Hegseth views the “infidels” primarily as the Muslim people. However, Hegseth’s “Christian” crusade goes well beyond that. If he were able to annihilate every Muslim on earth, he would then set his sights on anyone who does not share his heretical Christian Nationalist ideology.

With a “divine” mission to “kill, kill, kill” (Hegseth’s words), there is no need and no room for rules of engagement. In fact, Hegseth calls the rules of engagement “stupid.” There is no need and no room for Just War. There is no need and no room for international law. There is no need and no room for constitutional law. As Hegseth sees it, his wars are “anointed” by God.

Back in 2001 and 2003, GW Bush and the neocons in his administration justified the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan by accusing the Muslims in those regions of being “religious fanatics.” In truth, the fanatics within Islam are almost exclusively subgroups within Sunni Islam—including the members of ISIS, ISIL, al-Nusra, al-Qaeda, etc. You know, the Muslim fanatics that are supported by Donald Trump and the U.S. government, the ones that Trump helped to put in power in Syria. They are rarely found (at least in large numbers) within Shia Islam.

Today, however, the “religious fanatics” are located in Washington, D.C., and in Christian Zionist evangelical churches, personified in Pete Hegseth. Fanatics of any kind—religious or secular—who obtain political and military power quickly become war criminals and mass murderers. Pete Hegseth is no exception. On the very first day of Trump’s illegal war of aggression against Iran, Hegseth superintended over the massacre of 160 innocent people most between the ages of 6 and 12. In fact, this attack came only 5 minutes after the first attack, which murdered Iran’s Supreme Leader.

The massacre of these little schoolgirls in Iran was the most horrendous massacre of civilians by American military forces since the massacre at My Lai during the Vietnam War in 1968, in which somewhere between 350 – 500 civilians (which always means mostly little children, women and elderly men) were murdered.

This atrocity in Iran would not have occurred had Hegseth not dismantled the rules of engagement. That’s what the rules of engagement do: They prevent massacres of civilians such as happened in Iran. Don’t expect Pete Hegseth to lose any sleep over it, however. As with all fanatics, Hegseth has no conscience. Making Hegseth’s criminality ever more Draconian is the fact that Hegseth was warned by military brass to NOT eviscerate the military’s rules of engagement.

Politico covers the story: “Top military officials warned the Pentagon unsuccessfully last year not to gut oversight offices that limit risk to civilian casualties and investigate responsibility for their deaths, such as the recent strike on an Iranian girls’ school that killed hundreds of children.

Then-Central Command chief Erik Kurilla and Joint Chiefs Chair Gen. C.Q. Brown pushed Defense Secretary Pete Hegseth not to slash the Civilian Protection Center of Excellence and other similar initiatives at American command posts, according to Wes Bryant, the Pentagon’s former chief of civilian harm assessments and two other people familiar with the matter.

Opponents of the move, which also included Adm. Christopher Grady (former vice chair of the Joint Chiefs) argued that the staff were critical to preventing risks to civilian populations before U.S. strikes and to probing deadly Pentagon attacks, according to the people, and would ultimately save resources for military operations. Hegseth instead chose to reduce the number of employees working on the issue from 200 to less than 40.

The high level of opposition to the cuts, which has not been previously reported, hints at the tension between top military officials and their civilian leader over the rules of engagement in combat, which the Pentagon chief has called “stupid.” It also comes as preliminary reports suggest the U.S. may have accidentally targeted the elementary school, which killed more than 170 students and is the largest U.S.-led killing of civilians in decades.”

I question whether the incineration of those little girls was an accident. I say that because the school that Hegseth blew up was a private girl’s school that catered specifically to IRGC (Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps) officer’s children. The fact that the building was a grade school and not a military facility was known to the U.S. since at least 2016. U.S. military leaders also knew that most of the children at the school were IRGC children. I find it very difficult to believe that this was a coincidence.

The revelation of previous backlash also follows Hegseth’s announcement this week that he would further cut the lawyers who advise commanders of an operation’s legality, known as judge advocate generals. He already fired many of those Army, Navy, and Air Force lawyers in the first days of the administration. The decision to dismantle the civilian casualty offices could intensify criticism as more details emerge about the school struck next to an Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps base in the opening hours of the U.S.-Israeli operation. Democrats have used the incident to call for Hegseth’s resignation.

Hegseth should not only be removed from office, but he should also be arrested, imprisoned and tried for war crimes and crimes against humanity. Tensions within the Pentagon over the gutted offices are likely to continue. “I do know that there are people, not a small number of people inside the Pentagon itself, that are behind [civilian harm mitigation and response],” said Bryant, the former official. “It said ‘civilian protection,’ and that’s woke,” Bryant said, referencing Hegseth’s efforts to root out diversity and equity programs he believes undermines the military’s core missions. “Ultimately, it was going to be cut.”

Hegseth’s bloodlust in the name of God is a reflection of his rejection of Christ’s New Covenant. As with all Christian Zionists, they are stuck in the Old Testament. They see Israel and its puppet state, America, fighting wars against Muslims analogous to the Mosaic wars against the Amalekites and Canaanites.

[Editor’s Note: The U.S. military investigation regarding this school bombing has not been finalized. I want to know... Who the intel came from and who gave the order? If it was Hegseth then I do not disagree.]

Has Trump Let Netanyahu Destroy America?

By Paul Craig Roberts, 03/27/2026
PaulCraigRoberts.org

Donald Trump's reelection as President was a hopeful development for Americans. Obama and Biden had dismantled America with open borders and DEI. Millions of people were walking into the country claiming health, food, and housing benefits. Merit was cast aside, and a system of race and gender privileges had taken the place of merit and equality under law. White heterosexual males had become second class citizens.

Trump's win was convincing. He found himself with a majority of the Supreme Court. Republicans had the House and Senate, although by narrow margins. AI and data centers were invigorating the economy. Trump pardoned the wrongfully convicted Jan 6 "insurrectionists." The Justice Department was pursuing the Democrat officials who had weaponized law and committed felonies. The border was being closed. It looked like America would be put back on its feet. But before the chance at renewal could be set in stone, Netanyahu and the Zionist Lobby intervened. Trump was moved from MAGA to MIGA.

Trump gave American approval to the Israeli genocide of Palestine. He fortified the genocide with American money, weapons, and diplomatic cover. He attacked Iran for Israel twice. The first time after Israel's attempt failed to destroy Iranian uranium enrichment capability used only for peaceful purposes, not for weapons. The second Trump attack on Iran was as Netanyahu's partner in a sneak military attack on Iran, thus initiating a major war that has not turned out to be the cake walk Trump promised.

Currently the war is going against Israeli-America. Iran has demonstrated staying power and that its missiles can penetrate Israeli-American defenses. US air and naval bases in the Persian Gulf have been badly damaged, some apparently put out of action, and oil sheikdoms that hosted the American bases have had their energy facilities destroyed. Iran has demonstrated that Israeli-America cannot protect Dimona, the site of Israel's nuclear facilities and weapons. The Gulf of Hormuz is selectively open according to Iran's decision. Iran has demonstrated that its missiles can hit Diego Garcia and Crete, resulting in the removal of US carriers long distances from the conflict, thus reducing the effectiveness of range-limited fighter aircraft. The insecurity that the war has brought to gas and oil facilities has raised energy prices, bringing inflation in its wake. On top of it all, it appears that, confident of quick victory, Netanyahu and Trump initiated a major war unprepared and whose interceptor missiles have run out, but Iran's attack missiles have not.

Trump does not know what to do. His ultimatum to Iran expired last Monday, but Trump extended it 5 days. There is speculation that either he is creating conditions for declaring victory and going home or is stalling for time to assemble sufficient forces for an invasion, if not of the Iranian vast land mass then of Kharg Island. In other words, Trump is weighing up his choices: to declare victory and leave or to go in deeper.

There are reports that Trump has ordered US Marines and paratroops to be sent to bases in the area. If so, it remains to be seen if Iran will strike the troops in their bases before they can invade. The number of American soldiers being sent is not sufficient for a land invasion force. If the intent is to occupy Kharg Island, how do the soldiers arrive alive? If they do arrive, what are they supposed to do, and how do they get out alive? Considering the total failure of Pentagon planning for the war, it seems we are looking at more unaddressed questions.

Meanwhile, the domestic agenda has fallen apart. The prosecutions of New York Attorney General

Leticia James, James Comey, and the coterie of Democrat officials who framed Trump supporters and did their best to imprison and dispossess Donald Trump has gone by the wayside. It seems that the Democrats will not be held accountable for weaponizing law, thus leaving weaponized law unchallenged for future use.

With Trump's attention directed elsewhere by Netanyahu, Minneapolis and Minnesota were able to defeat Trump's deportation attempt. Moreover the Democrats refused to fund the Department of Homeland Security, thus closing down TSA airport security. Lines to board flights, thanks to Democrats, became four hours long. People missed their flights and connections and confusion reigned. What did Trump do? Did he point to the Democrats? No. Trump pulled ICE off of deportations and assigned them to take the place of TSA. In other words, Trump pulled the Democrats' bacon out of the fire for them.

It is difficult to imagine a mistake of this magnitude if Trump was not preoccupied by the war Netanyahu, "America's Greatest Friend," roped him into. Having been roped into Netanyahu's war for Greater Israel, Trump is trapped between a rock and a hard place. Thinking the war would be over in three days, no planning was done and Iranian capability was dramatically underestimated. Midterm US elections are on the scene. Trump has stupidly fractured his MAGA movement. He cannot survive politically with a war defeat. How does he obtain a victory? Will nuclear weapons be his and Netanyahu's alternative to defeat by Iran?

Trump, so determined to demonstrate his support for Israel, this time faces impeachment and conviction and subsequent prosecution if Democrats regain control of Congress. If so, Donald Trump becomes the fall guy for Netanyahu. Trump will be blamed, but it is Netanyahu and Israel's powerful Zionist Lobby that rules America who took Trump to war. As the Democrat Sodom & Gomorrah Tower of Babel regime that succeeds Trump returns to office, it will be Netanyahu who destroyed America.

We Did Win, Didn't We?

By Charles Goyette, 03/25/2026
libertarianinstitute.org

"We've won. Let me tell you, we've won. You know, you never like to say too early you won. We won. We won the – in the first hour it was over. We won," President Donald Trump declared, claiming "we won" five times in just thirteen seconds at a Kentucky rally on March 11.

We've seen such misbegotten braggadocio before. Six weeks into the elective invasion of Iraq, President George W. Bush starred in a campaign stunt when he landed on the deck of the USS Abraham Lincoln aircraft carrier wearing a flight suit. He stood under a "Mission Accomplished" banner ordered up and paid for by White House spinmeisters. It was the "end of major combat operations," Bush said. Only it wasn't. Bush's Iraq War lasted almost nine years.

No one starts a war expecting to lose. Napoleon thought he would defeat Russia. Japan attacked Pearl Harbor in the desperate belief it could somehow prevail. The United States escalated to a peak of 543,000 military personnel on the ground in Vietnam on April 30, 1969. Our war lords never imagined that the humiliating end would come six years later to the day, when the last U.S. Marine guards were airlifted from the roof of the U.S. embassy on April 30, 1975. How could that have happened? Didn't we have "Big Belly" B-52s' carpet bombing with their 1,000 pound bombs? Didn't we have F-4 Phantoms and A-1's delivering walls of napalm? The enemy had no defense from the Agent Orange herbicide sprayed from C-123's that disclosed their jungle hiding places. And what about cluster bombs, helicopter gunships, howitzers, and naval gunfire, or our cutting edge communications and radar technology? We even had IBM computers processing logistics and body counts.

Yet, for all the might and plans, plans, plans, no one knows what will happen when the war starts. In Mike Tyson's telling, "Everyone has a plan until they get punched in the mouth." Trump was nonplussed that Iran did not sue for peace after the

If the administration's war visionaries like Marco Rubio, Pete Hegseth, Jared Kushner, and Trump himself had bothered to consider the possibilities of asymmetric warfare, they would have discovered a breathtaking lesson right under their own noses in the Pentagon's war gaming. Even better to serve them as a precedent, it was set in the Persian Gulf. Millenium Challenge was a massive 2002 war exercise, the biggest and most costly at that time, which combined computer simulations and live exercises. It pitted distinct capabilities and philosophies. The Blue Team, a stand-in for the United States, was highly sophisticated in its approach: centralized and controlled, awash in plans, data bases, information gathering, and metrics. The Red Team, led by a remarkable retired Marine general, Paul Van Ripper, was the opposite. As the rogue commander of a fictitious Persian Gulf state, Van Ripper's decision making was decentralized. He trusted his men to draw upon their own experiences and make necessary judgements accordingly. They were guided by a shared strategic objective, yet were allowed to be innovative and their tactics unforeseen by their opponent's computerized predictions.

From devastating early success in the fog of war, to preemptive strikes with explosive laden speed-boats, Van Ripper's team was easily victorious over the Blue team's cutting-edge technology. When the Red Team lost fiber optics and microwaves, rather than turning to satellite communications that could be intercepted, they turned to couriers on motorcycles and light signals. They even embedded messages in the local calls-to-prayer.

The Pentagon stopped the game, re-floated the Blue Team's sunken ships, and re-wrote the rules of the game and started over. At one point in the simulation, the Red Team was forbidden to shoot down any of the enemy's approaching aircraft. Van Ripper was forced to turn on his radars and reveal positions, while several of his successful asymmetrical tactics were banned. The exercise was scripted to guarantee a Blue win.

Van Ripper resigned in protest. Interviewed afterwards about the Millenium Challenge, General Van Ripper harkened back to his experience as a young officer in Vietnam: "The computers in Saigon said we were winning the war, while out there in the rice paddies we knew damn well we weren't winning the war."

On May, 15, 2007 in a Republican presidential primary debate, moderator Brit Hume of Fox News asked Dr. Ron Paul, "What would be your strategy initial waves of U.S. bombing. How could Iran not quickly capitulate since force and might were so overwhelmingly on the global American military empire's side?

for ending the war in Iraq?" Congressman Paul answered, "We just marched in. We can just march out." From that date forward the Iraq War that so many of its champions now disavow went on for another four and one-half years, with all of the additional lives and money lost.

When the president declares victory, he would do well to remember the rest of the expression that was born in the Vietnam War: "Declare victory and come home."

War Abroad and Authoritarianism at Home

By Ron Paul, 03/23/2026
RonPaulInstitute.org

“War is the health of the state.” That phrase, coined by Randolph Bourne, explains why opposition to war is a priority of many libertarians. War allows governments to increase spending, taxes, and regulations in order to feed the war machine. Wars can justify measures that remain in place long after the wars end. An example of this is income tax withholding that was created to fund World War Two.

The use of war as a justification for increased interference in the market is reason enough for libertarians to oppose war. However, war also enables the government to violate liberty. During the Civil War, President Lincoln suspended habeas corpus, shut down newspapers, and instituted a military draft. The draft was also used in World Wars One and Two, as well as Korea and Vietnam. During World War One, Congress passed the Sedition Act, outlawing criticism of the government.

Widespread violations of liberty are a hallmark of the ongoing “war on terror.” An infamous example of war being used to justify violations of liberty is the internment of Japanese Americans during World War Two.

Given this history, it is not surprising that the Iran War may lead to crack-downs on free speech. Following criticisms of the media’s coverage of the Iran War by President Trump and Defense Secretary Pete Hegseth, Federal Communications Commission (FCC) Chairman Brendan Carr made a post on Twitter telling broadcast networks that the FCC has the power to revoke their broadcast licenses if they do not fulfill their responsibility to act in the “public interest.” This was clearly a threat to revoke the license of any broadcast network whose coverage of the war displeases the Trump administration.

Threatening to use the FCC’s power to shut down broadcast networks that the president dislikes is a blatant violation of the First Amendment by Chairman Carr. Chairman Carr may think that he can get a court to approve revoking a broadcaster’s license for its war coverage by claiming it is endangering national security. This would hardly be the first time the government used national security as an excuse to censor its critics.

Since the US is waging the Iran War in collaboration with Israel and the Trump Administration supports defining criticism of Israel as antisemitism, it is not out of the realm of possibility that opposition to the war will be labeled as anti-semitic hate speech and be banned.

Thousands of American troops are being deployed to the Middle East. With no end to the war in sight and the US military taking on the task of ensuring oil tankers have safe passage through the Strait of Hormuz, the US military may soon need a major increase in troops. White House Press Secretary Karoline Leavitt has refused to rule out the possibility that President Trump may reinstate the draft.

The Fiscal Year 2026 National Defense Authorization Act (NDAA) makes implementing the draft easier than ever by automatically registering every 18-year-old man with the Selective Service. The draft assumes rights are gifts from the government that can be revoked at the whim of government officials.

Violations of liberty come along with wars. Therefore, opposition to wars unrelated to the legitimate security needs of the country must be a priority for all who value liberty.

After Being Attacked By US & Israel, Iran Seeks Nuclear Weapons

by Sean Miller, 03/26/2026
infowars.com

Two unnamed sources within Iran have said that the U.S./Israeli attack has deepened Tehran’s interest in seeking nuclear weapons. This is exactly what Russian President Vladimir Putin warned would happen at the outset of the conflict. After the killing of Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, the Revolutionary Guards have taken dominant control over Islamic Republic, and with that “hardline views on Iran’s nuclear approach are in the ascendant.”

Reuters detailed Iran’s increased interest in atomic ambitions: “The idea of quitting the NPT – something hardliners have previously threatened (has been increasingly aired on state media along with the idea – once taboo in public) that Iran should go outright for the bomb. Tasnim News Agency, which is affiliated with the Guards, on Thursday published an article saying Iran should withdraw from the NPT as soon as possible while sticking with a civilian nuclear programme.

Hardline politician Mohammad Javad Larijani, brother of senior official Ali Larijani who was killed in a strike this month, was quoted by state media this week urging Iran to suspend its membership of the NPT. ‘The NPT should be suspended. We should form a committee to assess whether the NPT is of any use to us at all. If it proves useful, we will return to it. If not, they can keep it,’ he said. Earlier in the month, state television aired a segment with conservative commentator Nasser Torabi in which he said the Iranian public demanded: ‘We need to act in order to build a nuclear weapon. Either we build it or we acquire it.’”

Muslims are permitted to lie to non-Muslims, making Khamenei’s repeated claims that Iran was not seeking the bomb questionable at best. Tehran claimed “Khamenei had banned nuclear arms as forbidden in Islam and citing its membership of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.” The Islamic Republic attested its atomic ambitions only involved peaceful nuclear technology, such as energy production. The West long

Trump Administration Revokes EPA Endangerment Finding in “Largest Deregulatory Action in U.S. History”

By Rebecca Terrell, 02/27/2026
TheNewAmerican.com

On February 12, President Donald Trump and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Lee Zeldin announced the finalization of a rule rescinding the 2009 Greenhouse Gas (GHG) Endangerment Finding and eliminating all related federal GHG emission standards for motor vehicles and engines. The administration described the action as the single largest deregulatory measure in American history, projecting savings of more than $1.3 trillion for taxpayers and consumers between 2027 and 2055.

The Endangerment Finding, issued by the Obama-era EPA in December 2009, determined that six greenhouse gases — including carbon dioxide and methane — endanger public health and welfare under Section 202(a) of the Clean Air Act. That finding served as the legal foundation for more than 16 years of federal GHG regulations on vehicles, engines, and other sources, including fuel-economy mandates, electric-vehicle incentives, and off-cycle credits that manufacturers used to meet compliance targets.

Removing Mandates

In the February 12 announcement at the White House, Administrator Zeldin stated: “The Endangerment Finding has been the source of 16 years of consumer choice restrictions and trillions of dollars in hidden costs for Americans. Referred to by some as the ‘Holy Grail’ of the ‘climate change religion,’ the Endangerment Finding is now eliminated.” The rule also removes all off-cycle credits, including those tied to the widely disliked automatic start-stop technology in vehicles.

The EPA’s economic analysis estimates $1.1 trillion in savings from lower new-vehicle costs (an average of more than $2,400 per vehicle) and an additional $200 billion from avoided expenses related to electric-vehicle chargers and infrastructure. By repealing the standards, manufacturers will no longer face federal mandates to integrate specific technologies or shift production toward electric vehicles, restoring consumer choice in light-duty, medium-duty, and heavy-duty vehicles.

The rulemaking followed an extensive public process. After President Trump’s Day One executive order directing review of the finding, the EPA initiated formal reconsideration in March 2025 and proposed the rescission in July 2025. The agency received approximately 572,000 public comments and held four days of virtual hearings. The final rule cites recent Supreme Court decisions, including West Virginia v. EPA and Loper Bright Enterprises v. Raimondo, which clarified limits on agency authority and emphasized that major policy questions belong to Congress.

EPA Created to Further Globalism

This could mark the unwinding of globalism and the reversal of policies put into place in the 1970s to gut America’s manufacturing sector and build out Asia. Interestingly, the EPA was created in 1970. It was tasked with identifying what gases factories emitted and then stigmatizing them as a backdoor way to inhibit industrial production. Sulfur dioxide (SO2) was its first choice — later, carbon dioxide (CO2). This coincided with the Ford Foundation’s influential 1974 report A Time to Choose, overseen by McGeorge Bundy. That document framed energy conservation and reduced demand as national imperatives, implicitly endorsing the managed contraction of energy-intensive sectors such as steel, paper, and heavy manufacturing.

Openly declaring an intent to offshore jobs and hollow out the industrial heartland would have been politically impossible. Instead, successive layers of environmental rules on SO2, and later on CO2 through the Endangerment Finding, achieved the same result by raising compliance costs, discouraging new investment, and tilting the competitive landscape toward low-wage, lightly regulated producers in Asia. The effect was the same: American factories closed, supply chains stretched across the Pacific, and working-class communities were told the sacrifice was necessary for cleaner air and a “sustainable” planet.

Prioritizing America Again

With globalism now visibly fraying — exposed by pandemic supply shocks, strategic rivalry with China, and the recognition that ceding manufacturing capacity has weakened national security — the Trump administration is dismantling the regulatory architecture that facilitated that transfer of industry. By eliminating the Endangerment Finding and its downstream mandates, the White House is removing the backdoor economic penalties that made domestic production uncompetitive. The goal is straightforward: re-shore steel, autos, chemicals, and other core industries; restore high-wage manufacturing jobs; and rebuild the strategic industrial base the United States once took for granted. In place of the globalist model of managed decline, the new policy prioritizes American energy abundance, consumer choice, and economic sovereignty — precisely the objectives that the layered SO2-and-carbon regime was designed to suppress.

Iran Seeks Nuclear Weapons
believed Tehran was developing nuclear weapons however. In 2024 a UN weapons inspector warned that Iran already had nuclear weapons.

A 2009 Brookings Institute white paper detailed the various paths the U.S. could take to prohibit Iran from attaining a nuclear weapon, and the benefits and risks of each course of action. Nearly everything witnessed so far in the current Iran war was laid out in this 2009 document.

Alex Jones has warned of Iran’s nuclear capabilities for decades, explaining the nuclear false flag risk associated with it, the U.S. trap of a war with Iran and how Israel waging war on Iran could lead to WWII. Russia has been supplying Iran with conventional weapons throughout the month-long conflict and the country’s former president Dmitriy Medvedev has warned that other nations may give Iran nuclear weapons.

Canada's House Of Commons Passes 'Anti-Christian' Bill That Would Criminalize Quoting Bible

By Anthony Murdoch, 03/26/2026
www.lifesitenews.com

OTTAWA — The majority of Canadian MPs have voted to pass a Liberal bill that will allow the criminalization of religious expression and belief when quoting parts of the Bible, including about homosexuality and gender. Conservatives are now calling on Christians to pray and 'flood senators' with phone calls and emails opposing the bill.

Early Wednesday evening, MPs from the Liberal Party and the Bloc Québécois, in a 186-137 vote, passed Bill C-9, known as the "Combatting Hate Act." Conservatives, NDP, and Green Party MPs voted against the bill in a rare form of unity among the usually opposing parties. A last-minute effort by the Conservatives to change the wording of the bill failed to pass. Earlier this week, Liberal MPs forced the bill through the report stage, after shutting down all debate on the bill in the committee stage. The bill now heads to Canada's rubber-stamp Senate for review.

In comments sent to LifeSiteNews, Campaign Life Coalition (CLC) blasted the passage of Bill C-9 and called upon "Christians and pro-life advocates to prepare for increasing hostility... With the passage of Bill C-9 in the House, Christians and pro-life advocates will almost certainly face an entirely new level of hostility, as the door swings open to actual persecution under a cloak of supposed legality," said CLC's Campaigns Manager David Cooke, who is also a Christian pastor.

Cooke said the Bill C-9 was framed as a law going after "hate," but, in reality, it is a bill that religious leaders from various faith communities say "could lead to hate-related charges against believers—empowers ideologically-driven police officers and judges to target, for the first time, the very word of God on matters of life, family, and faith. We must prepare for the battle ahead," said Cooke, adding Canadians must "commit" to the "One who has won the ultimate victory over every foe, demonstrated by His resurrection on that first Easter morning."

CLC's Director of Political Operations, Jack Fonseca, noted that Bill C-9 must be stopped in its tracks in the Senate, but admitted it will be a hard battle, as most of the senators were appointed by former Liberal Prime Minister Justin Trudeau. "The battle to defend religious freedom in Canada has now moved to the Senate, which, unfortunately, Justin Trudeau has spent the past decade stacking with anti-Christian bigots like Kristopher Wells, a radical LGBT activist who I suspect will relish the opportunity to criminalize parts of the Bible as 'hate speech,'" he said.

Despite this, Fonseca noted that there is always hope that things could turn around. "We call upon all people of goodwill to flood senators with phone calls, emails, social media comments, and, if possible, personal visits. For those who are Christian, we also encourage these efforts to be reinforced spiritually through extra prayer and fasting between now and the final third reading vote in the Senate. God answers those who ask for help," he said. Conservative MPs have been demanding that a Liberal amendment to the bill, which removes a religious exemption, be rescinded immediately.

Bill C-9 has been blasted by constitutional experts as allowing empowered police and the government to go after those deemed to have violated a person's "feelings" in a "hateful" way. The bill was introduced by Justice Minister Sean Fraser last year. The removal of the religious exemption prompted condemnation from the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops, who issued an open letter criticizing the proposed amendment and calling for its repeal.

Australian PM creates Fuel Supply Taskforce While Denying There is a Fuel Crisis

By Michelle Grattan, 03/19/2026
theconversation.com/us

The federal government has appointed Anthea Harris, former chief executive of the Australian Energy Regulator and of the Energy Security Board, as Coordinator of a new Fuel Supply Taskforce. The new taskforce will be established in Anthony Albanese's own Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet. Harris will be responsible for: Driving coordination between the Commonwealth and the states and territories on fuel security and supply chain resilience. Providing consistent, coordinated updates to the Commonwealth and states and territories on the fuel supply outlook, as well as the domestic fuel distribution. Supporting state and territory governments to get fuels to their regions where they are in demand, and acting as a single convening point for fuel supply and forward planning.

In a statement Albanese and Energy Minister Chris Bowen said: "This is a cross portfolio coordination role, ensuring the decisions of government are implemented quickly and smoothly." Federal, state and territory leaders met as the national cabinet on Thursday morning to discuss the fuel situation. In a communique after the meeting they stressed Australia was "in a good position at present and does not have an overall fuel shortage at this time." However, they acknowledged there were shortages in some areas because of increased demand.

The leaders appealed to Australians to only purchase "the fuel that they need" and not to "overbuy" which they said was "not the Australian way". The leaders said energy ministers and officials were working to coordinate supply updates around the country. Foreign Minister Penny Wong was engaging international counterparts about the continued flow of fuel shipments. The meeting was briefed by the Director General of the Office of National Intelligence Kathy Klugmann and head of the ASIO Mike Burgess.

The Era Of Deportations Has Begun!

European Parliament Backs Remigration Efforts In Major Victory For The European Right

By Thomas Brooke, 03/27/2026
Remix | rmx.news

The European Parliament has taken a major step toward a far tougher migration regime, approving a new negotiating mandate for legislation designed to speed up the deportation of illegal migrants and tighten enforcement across the bloc.

In a vote on Thursday, MEPs backed the so-called Returns Regulation by 389 votes to 206, with 32 abstentions, clearing the way for talks with the European Council on a new legal framework governing the removal of illegal migrants who have no right to remain in the European Union.

The result was driven by support from a broad right-wing and center-right coalition, including the European People's Party (EPP), the European Conservatives and Reformists (ECR), Europe of Sovereign Nations (ESN), and Patriots for Europe (Pfe), illustrating how the balance of power on migration has shifted in Brussels.

The proposal is intended to overhaul the EU's weak returns system, long criticized for allowing rejected asylum seekers and other illegal migrants to remain in Europe for years. When the regulation was initiated by the European Commission last year, Migration Commissioner Magnus Brunner summed up the scale of the failure when he said, "One out of five people who are told to leave the EU, actually leave the EU, and that is not acceptable."

The new framework would introduce stricter return procedures, longer detention in some cases, wider entry bans, and penalties for those who refuse to cooperate with their own deportation. It would also open the door to so-called return hubs outside the EU, an idea that was fiercely attacked by Brussels only a few years ago when Britain pursued a Rwanda plan, and Italy signed its Albania agreement.

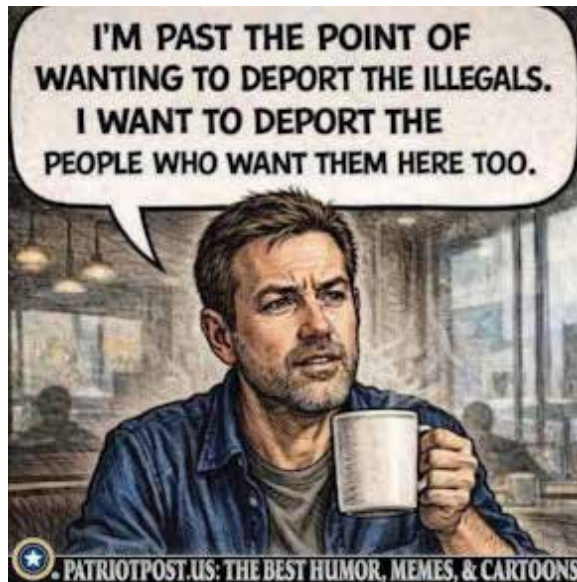

Conservatives hailed the vote as a breakthrough. Charlie Weimers, vice chair of the ECR, called it a landmark moment for his party and for tougher border enforcement in Europe. "New, stricter return rules are the Sweden Democrats' biggest negotiating success ever in the EU. It will soon be possible to send home those who are not supposed to be in Europe, and return hubs outside the EU will be made possible. The era of deportations has begun!"

EPP chairman Manfred Weber also stated, "Today we are clearly demonstrating that European solutions to take on illegal migration are possible. European citizens expect decisive action, and we are delivering. Anyone who does not have a right to remain in the EU must leave."

French nationalist MEP Marion Maréchal presented the vote as a turning point for the right. "It was a historic step for the coalition of the right in committee, and it is now a victory in the plenary session of the European Parliament: the 'return regulation' for greater firmness toward undocumented migrants has been voted through by the MEPs. After adoption in the trilogue, it will be up to the French government to take action!"

In a press release, Patriots for Europe declared that "European voters have long demanded a fundamental shift in migration policy" and that "a first decisive step has been taken." The group argued that the old Brussels approach had failed completely and said the new agreement would help restore control to national governments. "Crucially, this new agreement shifts the paradigm towards minimum harmonization," it said. "Instead of imposing a rigid, one-size-fits-all dictate from Brussels, this framework returns control to the national capitals."

PATRIOTPOST.US: THE BEST HUMOR, MEMES, & CARTOONS

Patriots for Europe also highlighted several measures it says will make the system far more effective, including "severe consequences for non-cooperation," stricter detention rules, and an end to what it described as abuse of the appeals process to delay removals indefinitely. The group said the maximum detention period had been extended to 24 months and that migrants deemed security risks could now be placed in enhanced-security facilities or prisons.

Left-wing organizations reacted with alarm, accusing the EPP of joining forces with nationalist parties and abandoning the old parliamentary cordon sanitaire. The European Council on Refugees and Exiles (ECRE) said the decision would "normalize measures that stigmatize migrants" and weaken rights protections, while Amnesty International condemned what it called an "increasingly harmful and draconian direction" in EU migration policy.

This backlash, however, confirms how dramatically the debate has changed. Policies, such as remigration, once denounced as extreme, are now moving into the mainstream of EU law, and the focus in Brussels is no longer on managing migration flows, but on removing those who are not entitled to stay.

Fuel Supply Taskforce

Meanwhile the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission (ACCC) has launched an enforcement investigation into claims of anti-competitive behaviour by each of the major fuel suppliers. The investigation covers Ampol Ltd, BP Australia Pty Ltd, Mobil Oil Australia Pty Ltd, and Viva Energy Australia Pty Ltd. In a statement on Thursday the ACCC said it had received reports about diesel availability to independent wholesalers and distributors servicing regional and rural areas.

ACCC Chair Gina Cass-Gottlieb said: "It is not our usual practice to publicly announce investigations, but given the significance of the issue, the ACCC is confirming this enforcement investigation. We recognise the widespread concerns held by consumers, businesses and farmers about fuel pricing and supply issues arising during the Middle Eastern conflict."

Why Won't Pam Bondi Release ALL Epstein Files?

Operation "Epstein Fury" in Iran is the greatest misdirection trick ever performed.

By: John Leake 02/25/2026
www.thefocalpoints.com

One of the strangest quirks of human cognition is the inability of people to see evil when it is standing right in front of them, staring them in the face. We are in the habit of believing that evil must be something occult or hidden from view that we can't see it when it is out in the open.

Why does Attorney General Pam Bondi refuse to release ALL of the Epstein files, thereby acting in contempt of Congress? She claims she is bound NOT by the Epstein Files Transparency Act (H.R.4405), but by other legal constraints, such as the need to protect victim identities, avoid compromising active investigations, and adhere to pre-existing privacy laws.

Bondi proclaims her "commitment to transparency" and to "follow the law," which includes shielding sensitive material such as personal medical files and graphic depictions of child abuse.

Her statements are the most patent humbug ever uttered by the mouth of man or woman. Names of victims and their sensitive medical information could be easily redacted. The depictions of child abuse compose the EVIDENCE of precisely the crimes that We the People have an interest in seeing prosecuted.

Bondi's assertion is akin to a prosecutor who claims that, in order to protect the victims of crime, he cannot show evidence of the crime to the jury. The public cannot grasp that the Attorney General of the United States would make an assertion so mind-boggling in its stupidity. It reminds of the scene in Mel Brooks's 1974 film, Blazing Saddles, when Sheriff Bart holds himself hostage.

Obviously Bondi is—on orders from her boss—refusing to release ALL of the files because they contain vast amounts of incriminating evidence that virtually our entire ruling class has NOT been constrained by the rules and norms that are applied to the vast majority of humanity, thereby greatly enriching itself at our expense and engaging in all manner of corrupt schemes, many of them funded by government money.

Though the public has been distracted by what President Trump calls a "short term excursion" —otherwise known as war on Iran — some investigators such as yours truly have remained focused on the Epstein files that have been released.

These remind me of the Marquis de Sade's outrageous novel 120 Days of Sodom about a group of depraved aristocrats during the waning days of Louis XIV's reign who are completely above the law and scrutiny. Their taste for committing acts of sadistic perversion against minors is the dramatic device of the novel, but it is only part of a much larger moral, social, and political problem that the Marquis de Sade was pointing out.

The salacious sexual conduct is an expression of general corruption, and the characters' arrogant presumption that they can do whatever in hell they want because their lives and fortunes are NOT governed by any legal authority. Indeed, many of them hold high office in Paris and therefore are the legal authorities.

Trump has recently downplayed the importance of the Epstein files, calling the case "boring" and a "desecration" intended to distract from his administration's successes. No one except the most ecstatic votaries of Trump's cult of personality believes such lame assurances for a second. Bondi's gambit is to stonewall and be sued, thereby tying up the case in court until the easily distracted public forgets about the whole thing.

Rothschild Bank Raided in French Epstein Investigation

By Andrew Muller, 03/27/2026
TheNewAmerican.com

Law enforcement is cracking down on elites wrapped up in the Epstein scandal — everywhere but in the United States.

This week in France, the Paris arm of the Edmond de Rothschild bank was raided by authorities in an Epstein-linked probe. Ariane de Rothschild — who employed Jeffrey Epstein — was present during the search, according to a source acquired by Reuters.

The raid follows multiple Epstein-related arrests of prominent European figures, including former Prince Andrew Mountbatten-Windsor and Peter Mandelson, former British ambassador to the United States.

The Raid

France's Central Office for Combating Corruption and Tax and Financial Offenses conducted the raid in an investigation targeting Fabrice Aidan, a former employee of the Rothschild banking dynasty from 2014 to 2016, for alleged corruption.

Aidan, who also worked for the United Nations from 2006 to 2013, emailed Epstein frequently from his official UN email account, forwarding security council briefs and reports to Epstein, allegedly some of them classified. Aidan signed off his emails with the title "special assistant to the special envoy of the secretary-general."

Reuters' source revealed Swiss financial regulator Finma, when asked if it was investigating Epstein-related ties to the Rothschilds, "considered all reliable information in its supervision and conducted in-depth reviews when in doubt about the integrity of business activities."

Everything about the probe is vague, leaving analysts wondering if the Rothschilds are also being quietly investigated for criminal activity.

Rothschild: Deep State Sacred Cow

The magnitude of any Rothschild affiliate facing accountability is significant, considering the power behind the outfit. Indeed, the Rothschilds are the pinnacle of

House of Rothschild: "The Rothschilds had decided the outcome of the Napoleonic Wars by putting their financial weight behind Britain."

Deep State financing. The family's origins trace back to 15th-century Frankfurt, Germany, with business beginning in 1769 under Mayer Amschel Rothschild. On their website, the Rothschilds boast that they are "unconstrained by short-term thinking and take a long-term view" in their global advisory and business activities.

They have even determined the outcome of wars. Former Harvard professor Niall Ferguson, hardly a critic of the family, wrote in his book The World's Banker: The History of the House of Rothschild: "The Rothschilds had decided the outcome of the Napoleonic Wars by putting their financial weight behind Britain."

Furthermore, Gary Allen, the author of None Dare Call It Conspiracy, noted that "during our Civil War, the North was financed by the Rothschilds through their American agent, August Belmont, and the American South through the Erlangers, Rothschild relatives." Both world wars were also heavily influenced by the Rothschild web of

Arizonan Unravels ASU's Standout in Epstein Files

By Rebecca Terrell, 04/01/2026
TheNewAmerican.com

In the deluge of Jeffrey Epstein's unsealed files, few institutions stand out more starkly than Arizona State University (ASU). Kristen Williamson can tell you why. A former accountant and litigation consultant turned independent researcher, since 2018 she's been exposing ASU's transformation into a hub for Central Intelligence Agency (CIA)-backed technocracy, biowarfare, genetic engineering, and control of the water supply. Her work, chronicled at KristenWilliamson.Substack.com, exemplifies how a single determined citizen can pierce the veil of elite secrecy.

Williamson first looked into ASU's education programs, which stood out to her as tailored for a technocratic biosurveillance state, as she told The New American in a recent interview. Her research quickly led to ASU President Michael Crow, who founded the university's Biodesign Institute and nanotechnology programs. Crow has been at that helm since 2002, having begun his career at Columbia University, the cradle of technocracy. He also serves as chairman and longtime trustee of In-Q-Tel, the CIA's nonprofit venture-capital arm, established in 1999 to funnel taxpayer dollars into tech startups. That raised significant red flags for Williamson.

Crow's powerful position earned him a spot on Fortune's list of the top 50 influential world leaders in 2019, and Williamson calls him Arizona's "de facto governor." Her Substack posts are packed with hyperlinks to primary sources that reveal In-Q-Tel's biotech portfolio.

Rothschild Bank Raided

banking. In a nutshell, they are power players in the conspiracy to manipulate international politics to usher in a new world order.

Thick as Thieves

As reported by The New American, Epstein was employed by the Rothschilds and worked closely with Ariane de Rothschild, the CEO of the Edmond de Rothschild Group nome sequencing), GRAIL (blood analysis), and Metabiota (pandemic modeling and biolab funding). Her documentation links these investments to Hunter Biden's investment and advisory firm Rosemont Seneca Partners, and thereby potentially to gain-of-function research.

The smoking gun can be found on ASU's Complex Adaptive Systems Initiative website, in an archive of 20-plus years' worth of slide presentations composed by George Poste, an ASU professor and longtime Crow collaborator. In a 2002 Phoenix New Times interview, Poste quipped that gene therapy's "stealth viral vectors," which bypass natural immunity, amounted to a "perfect biological weapon." One slide shows plans for "AI synthetic bio-weapons" and "gene drives" that could "destabilize the world."

Crow and Poste also oversaw Pacific Eclipse, a December 2019 tabletop exercise that simulated Covid disruptions and lockdowns with eerie precision a mere nine days before President Donald Trump's China travel ban. "How did these Arizona insiders know more than the president?" Williamson asks. Robert F. Kennedy, Jr. has called Covid a "CIA biodefense operation"; Williamson's evidence suggests ASU was its nerve center.

Today, Crow is building a "biotech corridor" via ASU's 2022 Discovery Oasis partnership with the Mayo based in Geneva.

Department of Justice files reveal a contract between Epstein's Southern Trust Company and the Rothschilds, with Epstein receiving a payout of tens of millions of dollars for "the Work." He even openly bragged about the collaboration. In a 2016 email to Palantir founder Peter Thiel, Epstein opened with, "As you probably know I represent the Rothschilds."

Clinic. Meanwhile, Poste advises the Arizona Bioindustry Association, pushing the CRISPR gene-editing tool and gene therapies, while George Church, an Epstein-funded genomicist, serves with Poste on the advisory board of INanoBio, a genome sequencer brimming with Department of Defense contracts.

Their influence extends beyond pandemics, however. Crow has launched ASU's Arizona Water Innovation Initiative with $40 million in state funds, positioning himself as steward of the Colorado River's fate. Partners include Israeli firm IDE Technologies for desalination — tech potentially laced with graphene oxide, a neurotoxin. In the realm of elections, Williamson believes In-Q-Tel may be tied to election irregularities in Arizona, through investments in the Spanish company Scytl.

"They're not just predicting crises," Williamson notes. "They're engineering them." The impact of her whistleblowing has been profound. She has armed journalists, lawmakers, and the public with irrefutable documentation. Her 2023 and 2025 interviews with The New American's Alex Newman went viral, and influencer Mike Benz and others now echo her. In Arizona, she is sparking calls for probes into Crow, Poste, and ASU.

What can you do? Contact Arizona Republicans Andy Biggs (480) 699-8239 and Paul Gosar (623) 707-0530, and demand federal investigations by intelligence committees. By adding your voice to Williamson's, you may help expose this dangerous empire.

While France's investigation into Fabrice Aidan and, by extension, Edmond de Rothschild's HQ, is ongoing and developing, many Americans view Europe's handling of Epstein's colleagues as far superior to that of the United States, where law enforcement has made virtually no attempts to hold the elites accountable.

Intestinal Permeability

Unicity's Healthy Living Hub blog.unicity.com

In recent years, the term “leaky gut” has gained traction in both scientific research and wellness discussions. What exactly is it, and why does it matter for your health?

Intestinal permeability, commonly known as leaky gut, occurs when the lining of your intestines becomes too permeable, allowing harmful substances like toxins, bacteria, and undigested food particles to pass into your bloodstream. This breach can spark inflammation and contribute to metabolic dysfunctions such as obesity, type 2 diabetes, and heart disease.

Let's dive into how gut damage triggers these issues, explore the causes and effects of leaky gut, and discuss solutions—including how Unicity Balance supports a healthy gut barrier.

The gut lining: your body's gatekeeper

Your gut lining is a remarkable barrier, far more than just a digestive buffer. It consists of a single layer of epithelial cells connected by tight junctions—think of them as gatekeepers that control what enters your bloodstream.

These junctions allow nutrients and water to pass through while blocking harmful substances like pathogens and toxins. Supporting this barrier is a layer of mucus and a diverse collection of helpful gut bacteria, known as the microbiota.

Together, they maintain a delicate balance, ensuring the gut lining stays strong and selective. When this balance is disrupted, however, the gut can become leaky, setting the stage for health problems.

What causes leaky gut?

Several factors can damage the gut lining and increase intestinal permeability: Poor diet: Diets high in sugar, processed foods, and unhealthy fats can weaken tight junctions and disrupt the gut microbiota. Chronic stress: Stress hormones like cortisol can impair gut barrier function over time.

Infections: Pathogenic bacteria or viruses can directly damage the gut lining. Medications: Long-term use of nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs or antibiotics can compromise the gut barrier.

These triggers erode the gut's defenses, making it more permeable and allowing unwanted substances to leak into your bloodstream.

Why leaky gut is bad

When the gut barrier fails, harmful compounds like lipopolysaccharides (LPS)—found in bacterial cell walls—escape into the bloodstream. This triggers an immune response, leading to chronic inflammation. Over time, this inflammation can disrupt metabolic processes.

For instance, research links leaky gut to insulin resistance, a hallmark of type 2 diabetes, as inflammation interferes with how cells respond to insulin. Similarly, in conditions like non-alcoholic fatty liver disease (NAFLD), leaked bacterial products reach the liver, promoting fat build-up and further inflammation.

This vicious cycle can fuel obesity, cardiovascular disease, and other metabolic disorders, showing just how deeply gut health impacts your body.

How to fix leaky gut

Restoring gut health requires a multi-pronged approach:

Dietary changes: Focus on whole foods like fruits, vegetables, and lean proteins while cutting back on sugar and processed carbs. Fiber-rich foods are especially key, as they nourish beneficial gut bacteria.

Stress management: Techniques like meditation or exercise can lower stress and support gut repair.

Supplements: Targeted products can help reinforce the gut barrier.

One such product is Unicity Balance, a fiber supplement designed to support both gut and metabolic health. Its blend of soluble and insoluble fibers—like guar gum, locust bean gum, and beta-glucan—helps regulate digestion and feeds gut bacteria. These bacteria produce short-chain fatty acids (SCFAs), compounds that strengthen tight junctions and reduce inflammation.

Plus, Unicity Balance includes vitamins and minerals like chromium, which help stabilize blood sugar—a critical factor in metabolic wellness. Balance helps to slow carbohydrate absorption, preventing blood sugar spikes that can stress the gut and body.

The science behind Unicity Balance

The magic of Balance lies in its fiber content. Fiber isn't just about keeping you regular—it's a prebiotic that fuels your gut microbiota. When bacteria ferment fiber, they produce SCFAs like butyrate, which nourish gut cells and reinforce the barrier. This process reduces permeability and curbs inflammation, addressing the root of metabolic dysfunction.

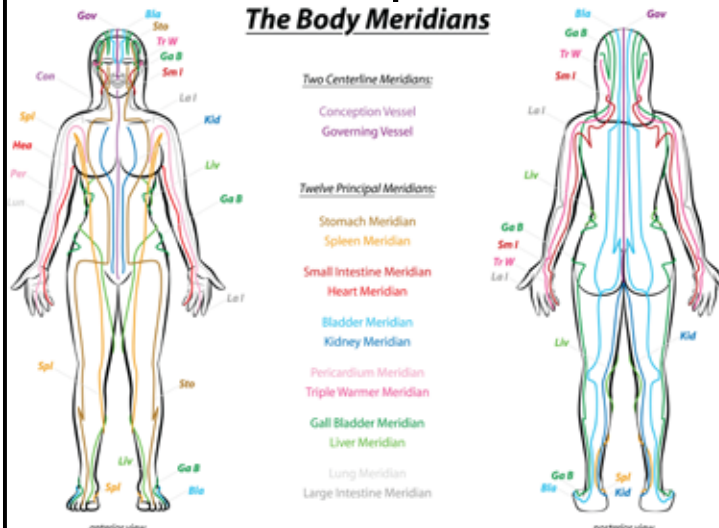

Additionally, the supplement's B vitamins and minerals support digestion and energy metabolism, creating a holistic boost for your system. A vital component to Feel Great, Unicity Balance complements a healthy lifestyle to fortify your gut.

Gut check: let's recap

Your gut barrier is a vital shield, and when it's compromised, the fallout can ripple through your entire body, driving metabolic dysfunction. By addressing leaky gut with smart nutrition, stress reduction, and tools like Balance, you can protect your metabolism and overall health. Unicity is available at The WholeBody Repair Clinic at 1240 W. Main St. Qz, Az 85346 or at ufeelgreat.com and use the referral code 68F2F8 for a nearly 33% discount.

Mammograms and Your Risk of Cancer

By Dr. Jockers at DrJockers.com

Women all around America and other industrialized nations are told that regular mammograms are the best approach for early breast cancer detection. A mammogram is an X-ray of the breast that looks to find tumorous growths that are otherwise undetectable in a physical exam. New research has revealed how dangerous mammograms are. X-rays use ionizing radiation to create the photographic image. Despite enormous funding and research, mammography has a very strong opposition in many quadrants of the medical and natural health communities.

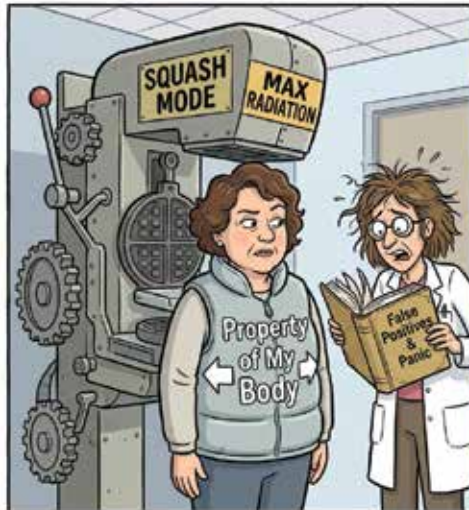

This opposition is due to the dangers involved with the amount of harmful radiation, the inaccuracy rates, and the economic costs. Yearly mammograms had been recommended for women over the age of 50.

In 2001, US health officials began recommending women over 40 get regular mammograms. The Lancet wrote in July 1995 that "the benefit (of mammograms) is marginal, the harm caused is substantial, and the costs incurred are enormous..."

Mammograms and False Positive Diagnoses

Many doctors have trouble trusting mammograms due to their enormous rate of false positive diagnoses. In one large study looking at 60,000 women, the researchers found that 70% of the detected tumors were not tumors at all.

These false positive results create a great amount of emotional stress on patients and family members involved. Even worse, these results lead to many unnecessary and invasive biopsies. Research has shown that 70-80% of all positive mammograms do not show the presence of cancer upon further biopsy testing.

The Unnecessary Stress of False Positives

False positives and unnecessary biopsies can dramatically alter an individual's health. The emotional stress of believing you have cancer when you do not is enough to trigger the onset or the acceleration of disease in the body.

Many women have undergone unnecessary chemotherapy, radiation, and mastectomies after receiving false positive results on a mammogram. This creates an enormous overall economic, emotional, and physical stress on the individual due to the limitations of this sort of testing.

Mammograms Bring Massive Radiation

Routine mammography exposes the individual to an exceptionally high amount of ionizing radiation. Ionizing radiation is something we are all exposed to in nature, and the body can handle a certain amount each year without it becoming risky. One series of mammograms (2 X-rays on each breast) is equivalent to the radiation dose of 8 normal chest or spinal X-rays. Due to this enormous blast of radiation, many experts warn that mammography actually increases the risk of breast cancer. Dr. Russell Blaylock, MD, estimated that annual mammography increases the risk of breast cancer by 2% each year.

The National Cancer Institute has stated that mammography is especially dangerous for younger women. In fact, they have stated that it could cause 75 cases of breast cancer for every 15 it identifies. Other studies have shown up to a 52% increase in breast cancer mortality in young women given annual testing.

Mammograms Induce Cancer Growth

The incidence of certain forms of breast cancer, such as ductal carcinoma in situ (DCIS) has increased by 328% since mammography was introduced. Cancer research has also found a gene called oncogene AC that is very sensitive to radiation.

Women who have this gene are at an extraordinarily high risk when exposed to mammography. Researchers estimate that 10,000 of these gene carriers will die of breast cancer each year due to mammography.

Mammography also requires the patient's breasts to be compressed. This compression is known to cause the release of cancerous cells into circulation, which greatly increases the risk of malignant spread.

Dr. Charles Simone, a former clinical associate in immunology and pharmacology at the NCI, has been a strong advocate against mammography. He says, "Mammograms increase the risk for developing breast cancer and raise the risk of spreading or metastasizing an existing growth."

Thermography is a Much Better Evaluation

I strongly believe that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. We should be striving to live an anti-cancer lifestyle every day. Somehow, our society has missed this. We are told it is okay to live a destructive lifestyle and then screen ourselves every year until we find the inevitable. When you get diagnosed... we treat you like the victim rather than showing you how you actually caused the problem with years of abuse.

I choose to live the anti-cancer lifestyle every day and do not waste my time with "testing for disease." However, for those of you who know you spent years abusing your system and would like a safe test to evaluate for cancer... I recommend thermography. Thermography is not FDA approved for cancer diagnosis and shouldn't be used specifically for that, but it is a non-invasive test that can find areas of increased metabolic activity that could be indicative of early cancer growth.

DOJ Settles With Flynn Over Wrongful Prosecution Lawsuit

By Paul Dragu, 03/26/2026
TheNewAmerican.com

The U.S. government is reportedly paying General Michael Flynn $1.2 million as part of a settlement in a wrongful-prosecution lawsuit linked to the Russia Collusion hoax that plagued President Donald Trump for much of his first term.

Flynn, who briefly served as Trump's national security advisor in 2017, filed a $50 million lawsuit against the Department of Justice (DOJ) in March 2023. He accused the DOJ of wrongful prosecution and abuse of process in his 2017 criminal case stemming from Special Counsel Robert Mueller's investigation into alleged Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election. Mueller eventually concluded that members of Trump election team did not collude with the Russian government to win the 2016 election.

Flynn's Comments

Flynn issued a statement on Wednesday commenting on the settlement. "Nothing can fully compensate for the hell that my family and I have endured over these many years — the relentless attacks, the destruction of reputations, the financial ruin, and the profound personal toll inflicted upon us all," he said. "No amount of money or formal resolution can erase the pain caused by a prosecution that should never have been brought."

Flynn added: "This ordeal stemmed from partisan government officials in a coordinated effort to pursue an innocent man as part of a broader campaign to undermine President Donald J. Trump and his administration. It was a relentless, partisan pursuit that weaponized federal law enforcement in an audacious and unjust manner... There should never again be such a brazen attempt to weaponize federal law enforcement against political opponents or innocent citizens. It is essential that we remain guardians of the rule of law. A huge part of that guardianship is accountability, holding those who abuse power to answer for their actions."

Tied to Russia Collusion Hoax

Flynn went on to praise the DOJ, saying, "This settlement goes far in demonstrating that the current Department of Justice, under the leadership of President Trump, Attorney General Bondi, Deputy Attorney General Blanche, and other dedicated departmental leaders, is committed to bringing accountability for the bad acts of those partisan actors."

A DOJ spokesperson said the settlement redressed a "historic injustice." Moreover: "This Department of Justice will continue to pursue accountability at all levels for this wrongdoing. Such weaponization of the federal government must never be allowed to happen again."

Partisan Punishment

According to Flynn's lawsuit, the lawfare he incurred was punishment by the Deep State and the Barack Obama White House for being chosen as Trump's national security advisor. The Deep State did not want Flynn advising Trump. Moreover, "Flynn roiled FBI leadership" going back to 2014, when he supported a "decorated counterterrorism agent who specifically named and accused Andrew McCabe and other top FBI officials of sexual discrimination." McCabe rose to deputy director of the FBI in 2016. He also "became a central player in the FBI's Russia election tampering investigation" and influenced the criminal inquiry against Flynn.

Publicly, Flynn's troubles started after he held calls and texted with Russian Ambassador Sergey Kislyak in December of 2016, part of a series of routine communications with dozens of national security advisor counterparts from other countries. The texts and calls, however, were framed in a nefarious light by Washington Post writer David Ignatius. "The WaPo/Ignatius piece set off a media frenzy that transformed the completely innocent Flynn-Kislyak conversation into a pearl-clutching political extravaganza of disinformation," we reported back in June 2024.

A few days later, Obama met in the White House with a group of Deep State actors. The supplemental pages to Flynn's lawsuit says this is what happened: "On or about January 5, 2017, FBI Director James Comey (Comey) and FBI Deputy Director Andrew McCabe (McCabe) met in the Oval Office with President Obama, Vice President Biden, Deputy Attorney General Sally Yates, CIA Director Brennan, ODNI Director James Clapper, and National Security Advisor Susan Rice. During this meeting, the participants agreed to try to damage incoming President Trump and his new Administration, including by trying to prosecute Flynn, President-elect Trump's incoming National Security Advisor, to cause him to resign as NSA, to cripple President Trump's ability to implement national security and foreign affairs policy changes, and potentially to get Flynn to turn on President Trump. They also agreed to withhold this agreement from the "transition team."

The Charge

By November of 2017, the Special Counsel's Office (SCO), a DOJ department, charged Flynn with one count of making false statements. "SCO falsely asserted that Flynn had intentionally omitted and denied speaking with Russian Ambassador, Kislyak during an interview with two FBI agents," per the lawsuit.

The charge triggered travel restrictions that proved profoundly burdensome. From the lawsuit: "As a result of the unlawful prosecution and false arrest and detention, Flynn was unable to travel freely inside and outside of the United States. Not only was his reputation tarnished by the unlawful prosecution, but he was unable to personally carry on his international consulting business. For the above reasons, the restrictions severely curtailing Flynn's movements were unlawful just as the prosecution that created Flynn's movement restrictions was unlawful."

Guilty Plea

Flynn pleaded to guilty to lying to FBI agents shortly after the charge was filed. He issued a statement explaining his decision as a sacrifice for his family. Also, Robert Mueller had cornered Flynn into a plea deal with false allegations that included a threat against his son.

Following his retirement, Flynn had formed a consultancy company with his son, Michael Flynn, Jr. One of their clients was a private Turkish company. The Mueller team falsely alleged that the Flynn's were in violation of the Foreign Agent Registration Act (FARA) by

Exposing the Con of the Con-Con

Book Review: The Con of the Con-Con, by Andy Biggs, Appleton, Wisconsin: Western Islands, 2025 edition, 144 pages, paperback.

In an era when constitutional fidelity is treated as an inconvenience rather than a sacred oath to be obeyed, the Republic owes a debt of gratitude to U.S. Representative Andy Biggs (R-Ariz.) for writing, and to Western Islands Publishing for reviving, The Con of the Con-Con — a timely and unflinching warning against the seductive call for an Article V convention to “fix” our Constitution.

Biggs originally penned this work during Barack Obama’s presidency, when federal overreach had reached an intolerable pitch. Yet his insights have proven prophetic, for the disease has worsened under successive administrations of both parties. In the new Foreword, Biggs reflects that “the Biden Administration was filled with more weaponization of federal institutions than at any time in American history,” a statement that is less lamentation than diagnosis. His continued mistrust of Washington is not partisan cynicism; it is the realism of a statesman who has witnessed the metastasis of centralized power from the inside.

Since writing the book, Biggs has traveled the country debating proponents of a so-called Convention of States, has served as president of the Arizona Senate, and has been elected to the U.S. House of Representatives five times. Yet, despite the pressures of Washington, his convictions remain unchanged. “I haven’t changed my position,” he writes, “which was based on a mistrust of Congress as well as having watched states capitulate to the national government.” That confession, distilled from experience, gives this reprint a gravitas that few political works achieve.

At its core, The Con of the Con-Con demolishes the naïve notion that a modern convention could somehow be corralled into modesty. Biggs reminds readers that Congress will never “quietly give up any of its power,” and that there exists no enforceable mechanism to limit such a convention to specific amendments. Once Pandora’s box is opened, every safeguard of liberty — from the Second Amendment to state sovereignty — would be vulnerable to erasure.

To those who blithely insist that “the states will save us,” Biggs answers with history. It was, after all, the states themselves that ratified the 16th and 17th Amendments — twin betrayals that shifted taxation and senatorial election power to Washington and stripped the states of their constitutional leverage via the Senate.

His warning is not hypothetical; it is historical. The brilliance of this book lies not merely in its legal reasoning, but in its moral clarity. Biggs understands that the Constitution is not broken — it is ignored. To convene a modern convention under the control of today’s political class is to hand the scalpel to the very surgeons who have already mutilated the patient. Reform will not come from rewriting the Founders’ charter, but from reawakening the citizenry to enforce it.

Western Islands Publishing has done a great service in reissuing this indispensable work. The new edition preserves Biggs’ original argument while situating it squarely in our perilous present, where the chorus for a “balanced budget amendment” or “term limits convention” grows louder but no less dangerous. The book belongs on the same shelf with the writings of James Madison and the Anti-Federalists, for it defends the Constitution not as a relic to be amended, but as a covenant to be kept.

In an age when political theater masquerades as patriotism, The Con of the Con-Con is a dose of tonic realism. Congressman Biggs’ unwavering stand, echoed throughout this reprint, reminds Americans that the surest way to lose liberty is to surrender the Constitution to those who already refuse to obey it.

For defenders of the Republic, this book is not optional reading — it is required ammunition. To order The Con of the Con-Con, ShopJBS.org.

failing to register as foreign agents. They threatened to prosecute his son, who was the father of a new baby, if General Flynn did not cop to a plea of lying to the FBI.

If General Flynn had had proper legal counsel, he would not have caved to such extortion. However, he was relying on the prominent legal firm Covington & Burling, whose lawyers persuaded him the plea deal was his only option if he wanted to spare his son from a prison term. However, Covington had a fatal conflict of interest in the matter, since they had prepared the Flynns’ company affairs and would be financially impacted if it became public that they had violated FARA.

Pardon and Lawsuit

Flynn eventually ousted his lawyers and hired a new team, one that included Sidney Powell. Then in January 2020, he moved to withdraw his guilty plea. By May of 2020, the DOJ had filed to dismiss the criminal case against Flynn. “However, activist Judge Emmet Sullivan, who was presiding over the case, did not want to let it go,” we reported. “He had intemperately denounced Flynn in court so vociferously that it had shocked even the prosecution.”

Flynn, who had previously rejected a pardon from Trump, eventually accepted one in November 2020. However, in 2023, he sued the DOJ as part of an effort to clear his name. This week, he got the conclusion he’s been seeking.

CIA Buried Russian 'Cancer Cure' File for 60 Years

A resurfaced Cold War-era CIA document has sparked public fury after reports claimed the agency hid a potential cancer breakthrough for more than 60 years. The 1951 intelligence memo, declassified in 2011 but now circulating widely online, summarizes Soviet research suggesting biochemical similarities between parasitic worms and malignant tumors and noting that certain anti-parasitic compounds, including a drug called Myracyl D, appeared to inhibit tumor growth in early experiments. Critics argue the CIA's decision to classify the report and lock it away bolsters suspicions that U.S. intelligence and "Big Pharma" suppressed promising leads that could have reshaped cancer treatment. However, mainstream outlets and researchers stress the document describes preliminary observations rather than a proven cure, and there is no evidence the findings led to effective therapies in humans. The controversy now fuels broader distrust of government secrecy and raises questions about how intelligence agencies handle potentially important scientific information.

Spain Could Grant Legal Status to 1.6M Migrants

Spain's socialist-led government is weighing an "extraordinary regularisation" that could grant legal status to up to 1.6 million undocumented migrants, far above the 500,000 initially expected under a one-time legalisation process slated to open between April and June 2026. The scheme stems from a Popular Legislative Initiative first taken up by Congress in 2024, aimed at long-term residents who arrived before the end of 2024 and can show social and economic ties to Spain.

must prove entry before December 31, 2025, at least five months of continuous residence, and a clean criminal record; most would receive a one-year renewable residence and work permit. Supporters in Madrid call the plan both humanitarian and pragmatic, saying it would bring workers out of the shadow economy and ease labour shortages in hospitality, elder care, construction and agriculture, sectors already heavily staffed by undocumented migrants. Business groups and Spain's central bank back expanded legalisation, arguing migrants have powered much of Spain's recent growth and are key to funding its ageing welfare state, while conservative and nationalist parties across Europe warn it will fuel more irregular migration and strain EU border and asylum systems.

FBI Silent as Coordinated Swatting Wave Targets Conservative Voices Across Multiple States

A coordinated wave of swatting attacks is targeting conservative influencers in several states, with victims asking why federal authorities have stayed mostly silent. Journalist Breanna Morello documents fake 9-1-1 calls reporting hostage situations at the homes of Benny Johnson, Joe Pags, Catturd, Gunther Eagleman, Chase Geiser, and Shawn Farash in Texas, Florida, and Tennessee. The hoaxes triggered heavily armed SWAT responses and left families shaken, prompting fears of an organized harassment campaign against right-leaning commentators. Morello highlights a disturbing pattern: five of the six targets received unsolicited cash-on-delivery pizza orders from Papa John's or Domino's around the time of the swatting, with some orders linked to numbers tracing back to local police departments. The FBI did not answer repeated questions about any probe, though Director Kash Patel later issued a brief public response.

tions about explosive allegations from journalist Tucker Carlson that the agency spied on his private communications and is preparing a criminal referral against him to the Department of Justice.

In a recent social media video, Carlson claimed the CIA accessed his text messages with contacts in Iran, which he described as standard journalistic outreach conducted before recent U.S.-linked military actions involving Iran. He alleges officials intend to use those messages to accuse him of operating as an unregistered foreign agent under the Foreign Agents Registration Act, despite his insistence that his loyalty lies with the United States. Carlson argues the supposed referral could serve as a pretext for surveillance warrants and an effort to "frame" him over his public criticism of U.S. foreign policy, especially on Israel and Iran. Both the CIA and the Department of Justice have declined to confirm or deny any investigation, leaving key questions unanswered and fueling concern over potential intelligence overreach into American journalism.

Section 702 and Warrantless Surveillance Fight

A bipartisan coalition in Congress plus civil-liberties and tech groups is pushing to sharply curtail the FBI's ability to search Americans' communications swept up under Section 702, as the law's April 20 renewal deadline looms. They argue "backdoor searches" of phone, location and web-browsing data have repeatedly targeted protesters, journalists and political donors without warrants.

FBI Memo Warns of Elevated Iran-Linked Threats Inside U.S.

The FBI has issued an internal Situational Awareness memo to law enforcement nationwide, warning of an "elevated threat environment" in the U.S. tied to the ongoing military conflict involving the U.S., Israel, and Iran. The bulletin highlights potential retaliatory actions by the Iranian government targeting U.S. military and government personnel, Jewish and Israeli institutions and supporters, and Iranian dissidents living in America. While officials say they have identified no specific, credible threat to the general public, the memo flags concern that domestic violent extremists of varying ideologies could be inspired by war footage, reports of civilian casualties, and incendiary rhetoric from Iranian leaders or terrorist groups. Law enforcement agencies are being urged to tighten security around sensitive sites, watch for lone-actor or opportunistic attacks, and step up intelligence-sharing, even as no public National Terrorism Advisory System alert has been issued in connection with the memo.

Government Schools Raising Woke & Illiterate Activists: Chicago Teacher Blows Whistle

Students across America are taking to the streets to protest ICE, deportation policies, and promote "social justice." The uprising is anything but organic, explained former Chicago teacher Geno Young to The New American's Alex Newman in an episode of Conversations That Matter.

“They are training up the next generation of mindless automatons who will take whatever order they give them, brainlessly, and protest,” said Young, who just published the new tell-all book Sex, Drugs, and Illiteracy: The Death of Education in America. In fact, the teachers’ unions and so-called educators themselves are behind the scheme, he explained.

Of course, raising activists for left-wing causes is just one element of the agenda, Young continued. Children are also being groomed to embrace perverse sexual ideologies and communism. The only hope, Young said, is if the Department of Education is completely dismantled while parents pull out their children and place them in good private schools and home schools.

Federal Food Policy Fuels Chronic Disease and Ballooning Healthcare Costs

Federal farm and nutrition policies are helping drive America’s chronic disease epidemic and its exploding healthcare bill, according to a new analysis from the Mises Institute. Decades of subsidies for commodity crops like corn, soy, and wheat have made ultra-processed foods and their derivatives—corn syrup, seed oils, and chemical additives—cheaper and more widespread than nutrient-dense whole foods. SNAP now channels billions in taxpayer dollars into this skewed food environment, with about one-fifth of benefits spent on junk food, deserts, candy, and sodas, and nearly 10 percent on sugar-sweetened beverages alone. Chronic and metabolic diseases linked to these diets account for roughly 85 percent of healthcare spending, much of it borne by Medicare and Medicaid. The analysis urges policymakers to rethink commodity subsidies, restrict SNAP purchases of junk food, and treat chronic illness as both a fiscal and public health emergency.

Trans-Identifying Golfer Sues After Ban from Women’s Events

A male golfer who identifies as female is suing the USGA, LPGA, and New Jersey’s Hackensack Golf Club after being barred from a 2025 U.S. Women’s Open qualifier under new “biological female at birth” eligibility rules. Hailey (James) Davidson, 33, alleges the policies violate New Jersey’s gender-identity protections and were crafted to target him personally after years of inquiries about transgender participation. Davidson previously competed on men’s college teams before undergoing hormone treatments and surgery, then dominating events on the NXXT Women’s Pro Tour in 2024. That prompted backlash from female players: NXXT adopted a biological-female rule, and 275 LPGA members signed a letter warning males retain a roughly 30 percent performance advantage in driving distance even after testosterone suppression. The LPGA now defends its revised policy as necessary to protect the competitive integrity of elite women’s golf, while Davidson presses ahead in court.

Netanyahu Can “Never Settle, Only Kill”

Former Knesset speaker and interim Israeli president Avraham Burg delivers a blistering indictment of Benjamin Netanyahu’s war policy in a new, 95-minute episode of The Tucker Carlson Show, accusing the prime minister of presiding over a “killing spree” with no real strategy or endgame. Burg argues that instead of pursuing security or peace, Netanyahu is locked into perpetual escalation that keeps him in power and shields him from legal and political accountability at home.

When asked: “What Is Israel’s Strategy?” Burg’s answer was stark: there is no coherent plan beyond military force and survival of Netanyahu’s coalition. He warns that this approach is hollowing out Israel’s democracy from within while further destabilizing an already fragile region. Burg contrasts the country’s founding ideals with the current government’s actions, suggesting that Israel has drifted far from its original moral and political compass.

Burg is equally unsparing about Washington’s role. In the segment “What Will the US Gain From This War?”, he contends that the United States is underwriting a campaign that brings little strategic benefit while absorbing the global political and moral costs. Another chapter, “How Do Israelis View the US?”, explores the tension between Israel’s deep dependence on American backing and growing public frustration with U.S. pressure and mixed signals.

Looking ahead, Burg questions whether Netanyahu fears Donald Trump’s return to the White House and how shifting U.S. politics could reshape Israel’s room for maneuver.

The episode closes on the “Greater Israel” project, with Burg warning that maximalist territorial ambitions make any genuine settlement with Palestinians nearly impossible. Framed by Tucker Carlson’s broader coverage of war, censorship, and Western political crisis, Burg’s interview portrays an Israeli leadership trapped in endless war—and a Washington establishment unwilling to say no.

Army Raises Enlistment Age to 42, Eases Marijuana Rules in Major Recruiting Shift

The U.S. Army is significantly widening its recruiting pool, raising the maximum enlistment age from 35 to 42 and easing some restrictions tied to America’s drug culture. Under a revised Army Regulation 601-210 taking effect April 20, applicants with no more than one conviction for marijuana possession or related paraphernalia will no longer need a waiver, though other drug offenses still require one. The Army’s move brings it in line with the Air Force, Space Force and Coast Guard, which already accept recruits up to 42, while the Navy caps enlistment at 41 and the Marine Corps at 28. Officials frame the change as a way to expand eligibility at a time when only about 23 percent of 17- to 24-year-olds meet military standards and when many states have legalized marijuana despite its federal status. A RAND study cited by the Army suggests older recruits are more focused, less likely to wash out and more likely to reenlist.

Unsuspecting Driver of Cardiovascular Disease

Nighttime exposure to artificial light may be a powerful, overlooked driver of cardiovascular disease, according to a large UK Biobank cohort study summarized by Biotics Research. Researchers tracked nearly 89,000 adults (average age about 62) with wrist-worn light sensors, analyzing roughly 13 million hours of exposure over almost a decade. Compared to people sleeping in the darkest conditions (0–50th percentile of night light), those with modestly brighter nights (51st–70th percentile) had a 12 percent higher risk of coronary artery disease, rising to 20 percent in the 71st–90th percentile and 32 percent in the brightest 91st–100th percentile. At the highest exposure level, risks of heart attack and heart failure jumped 47 percent and 56 percent, respectively, with elevated risks for atrial fibrillation and stroke as well. These associations persisted even after adjusting for lifestyle, socioeconomic factors, existing conditions, and sleep duration or efficiency, suggesting that circadian disruption from night light is an independent risk factor and a modifiable target for prevention.

Whitney Webb Warns 'Tech Billionaires Have Completely Taken Over'

Investigative journalist Whitney Webb is sounding the alarm that a powerful network of tech billionaires tied to Leslie Wexner and Jeffrey Epstein is quietly reshaping American governance into a "techno-feudal" system. In a report highlighted by NeedToKnow.news and a recent interview, Webb says Wexner used his Ohio stronghold of New Albany to build a de facto private government that evolved into JobsOhio, a nominally public-private agency that controls the state's liquor tax revenue with almost no public oversight. She argues this model has become a template for funneling billions in taxpayer subsidies to massive data centers run by Silicon Valley giants, while electricity costs soar and funding for public schools and healthcare is squeezed.

According to Webb, this "corporate welfare state"—backed by figures like Peter Thiel and Vice-President J.D. Vance—uses public-private partnerships, digital IDs, and privatized infrastructure to erode democratic accountability and lock citizens into surveillance-driven systems they cannot escape. She connects these structures to the same elite circles that nurtured Epstein's operations, contending that old-style blackmail networks have merged with high-tech data harvesting to give a small cadre of insiders unprecedented leverage over politics and policy.

Pope Leo Blasts 'Atrocious' Iran War as Catholics Blocked from Jerusalem Holy Site

Pope Leo has issued one of his strongest denunciations of war yet, declaring that God "does not listen" to the prayers of leaders whose "hands are full of blood" as the US-Israel conflict with Iran enters its second month. Addressing tens of thousands in St. Peter's Square on Palm Sunday, the pontiff called the Iran war "atrocious," warned that Christians in the Middle East are "suffering the consequences," and insisted that Jesus "cannot be used to justify any war."

His remarks came as Israeli police blocked Cardinal Pierbattista Pizzaballa, the Latin patriarch of Jerusalem, from entering the Church of the Holy Sepulchre to celebrate Palm Sunday, citing security concerns amid ongoing Iranian missile attacks. Church officials said it was the first time in centuries that a Latin patriarch had been barred from the site on Palm Sunday, calling it a "serious precedent" that ignored the spiritual needs of Christians worldwide. After international backlash, including criticism from some of Israel's allies, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said the patriarch would be granted full access to the church going forward, while maintaining that temporary closures of holy sites were driven solely by safety considerations.

Australia Begins Arrests Under New Antisemitism Hate-Speech Laws

Australia's new anti-hate-speech regime is already leading to arrests, fueling warnings of a major crackdown on pro-Palestinian expression and dissent. In Queensland, police detained two protesters at a student strike after they used or displayed the slogan "From the river to the sea," which the state has now explicitly banned alongside "Globalise the intifada" under fresh antisemitism laws carrying penalties of up to two years in prison.

Nationally, the Albanese government's Combatting Antisemitism, Hate and Extremism Act strengthens federal hate-speech and hate-crime offenses, lets authorities formally proscribe "hate groups," and was openly framed as a response to a deadly attack at a Jewish festival in Sydney. Human-rights organizations say the laws, coupled with expanded police powers at demonstrations, are already producing a chilling effect on Palestine activism and risk criminalizing core political slogans and peaceful protest.

Israel and FBI 'Manufactured' Assassination Plots to Push Trump Into Iran War

A new investigation by journalist Max Blumenthal alleges that Israel and the FBI collaborated to inflate and manipulate supposed Iranian assassination plots in order to keep President Donald Trump on a collision course with Iran. According to the report, FBI counterintelligence agents built cases around dubious informants and sting operations designed to convince Trump that Tehran was actively trying to kill him, while Israeli officials and their allies inside his administration fed his fears and urged increasingly aggressive responses.

Blumenthal highlights one alleged plot involving an Iranian American intermediary that the FBI itself appears to have largely orchestrated, alongside a broader media campaign framing Iran as a direct personal threat to Trump following the U.S. assassination of Iranian commander Qassem Soleimani. He argues that these converging operations helped justify Trump's February 2026 order to kill Iran's Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei and escalate into full-scale war, while keeping U.S. public scrutiny focused on Iran's behavior rather than covert Western provocations.

EPA Quietly Declines to Regulate New Drinking-water Contaminants

In its latest review, EPA chose not to regulate nine unregulated contaminants found in U.S. drinking water systems, even as independent monitoring shows many utilities struggling with pollution and aging infrastructure. Intelligence agencies have also dropped water and climate from this year's official national-security threat assessment.

Indian farmers are also protesting a new U.S.–India trade framework they say will “ruin farmers” and hand fields to market forces.

Pfizer’s Bid to Vaccinate Against Lyme

Pfizer is racing to revive the Lyme disease vaccine market with a new shot developed alongside French biotech Valneva, even as critics warn the rollout is moving faster than the safety debate. Unlike the Covid products that made Pfizer a household name, this Lyme candidate is a traditional protein-based vaccine that uses aluminum as an adjuvant, not mRNA, while Moderna is separately developing an mRNA Lyme shot still in earlier-stage trials. Pfizer and Valneva say Phase 3 data from the VALOR study show strong efficacy across children and adults and plan to seek regulatory approval as early as this year.

The HighWire’s “Tick Tock” investigation argues that regulators and patients should be wary, noting Pfizer previously had to drop about half the VALOR trial participants over site misconduct issues and that the study has reportedly missed a key primary endpoint. The piece also revisits the fate of LYMERix, the first human Lyme vaccine, which was withdrawn from the U.S. market in 2002 after reports of serious adverse events and class-action litigation, despite official assurances of safety. With both an aluminum-adjuvanted Pfizer shot and a future Moderna mRNA vaccine in the pipeline, critics say the Lyme market is being rebuilt without a full accounting of past harms or robust long-term safety data.

Phantom Army: War Without Hesitation

A new HighWire editorial warns that the Pentagon’s growing embrace of humanoid combat robots could create a “phantom army” that makes it far easier for U.S. leaders to launch and sustain wars. Writer Tracy Beanz focuses on Phantom, a rifle-capable humanoid robot built by defense startup Foundation, which already holds multimillion-dollar research contracts with the Army, Navy and Air Force and is being tested for breaching operations and frontline reconnaissance, including in Ukraine.

Company CEO Mike LeBlanc pitches Phantom as a life-saving tool that keeps American pilots and soldiers out of harm’s way, but critics cited in the piece argue the real effect is to lower political and moral barriers to conflict by removing human casualties from the domestic equation. The editorial notes that while current Pentagon policy requires a “human in the loop” before autonomous systems fire, AI-driven drones on today’s battlefields are already making targeting decisions when communications fail, raising fears that armed humanoid robots will inevitably follow.

Guitars for Veterans - Donations Needed

VFW Post 769 in Quartzsite is starting a guitar program for our veterans, and we are asking for guitar donations to help make this possible. These guitars will be used to teach veterans how to play, relax, connect, and enjoy the healing power of music. Many of our members want to learn but don’t own an instrument. If you have an acoustic or electric guitar you no longer use, please consider donating it. Your gift could change a veteran’s life. Drop it off at VFW Post 769, 305 N. Central in Quartzsite.

Thank you for supporting our veterans through music. (928) 927-7697

~ Is UNITY important? ~

What Does the World Say?

When asked, AI (artificial intelligence) responded:

Research indicates a strong desire for unity among Americans in 2026. Recent studies show that a significant majority of Americans believe in the potential for overcoming divisions and finding common ground. For instance, a report highlights that 76% of Americans feel the country can address its challenges collaboratively, an increase from 67% in 2023.

What Does the Bible Say?

Ephesians 4:3 Make every effort to keep the unity of the Spirit through the bond of peace.

Philippians 2:2 then make my joy complete by being like-minded, having the same love, being one in spirit and of one mind.

1 Corinthians 1:10 I appeal to you, brothers and sisters, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that all of you agree with one another in what you say and that there be no divisions among you, but that you be perfectly united in mind and thought.

Colossians 3:14 And over all these virtues put on love, which binds them all together in perfect unity.

Romans 15:5-6 May the God who gives endurance and encouragement give you the same attitude of mind toward each other that Christ Jesus had, so that with one mind and one voice you may glorify the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

“When a good thing takes the place of The Best thing, that is a bad thing.”

Things They Didn't Teach You in Church: Delusion

By: Jim Brouillette
CCHW Real News HQ
(Rumble and YouTube)

Delusion means: to mislead the mind or the judgement of the mind; to deceive. A person can be deluding themselves or others concerning the truth about anything; personal, political or spiritual. The delusion we see taking place in the world today is nothing short of prophetic. The end-product of delusion is deception, and we are warned many times in the New Testament not to be deceived (1 Cor. 6:9 & 15:33, Gal. 6:7, Luke 21:8).

In 1st Timothy 2:14 we find that deception has been the problem since the beginning; ...the woman being deceived was in the transgression. What happened then? Adam joined in. Nationwide we are currently seeing delusion run wild, especially concerning approval issues. There is a group of politicians and their constituents who consistently support the 20% positions while claiming to be in the majority. Some examples: border security and enforcement, parental rights in education & school choice, government waste and fraud reform (DOGE), voter ID laws, energy independence (Drill Baby Drill), police funding and public safety (including ICE), men playing in women sports, term limits for Congress, tougher sentencing for repeat violent criminals, opposition to child gender transition surgeries, protection of religious freedom, election integrity, gun rights for law-abiding citizens, merit-based college admissions, balanced federal budget, and free speech at colleges, online and elsewhere. As these core issues dominate our headlines, the liberal left wing of the Democratic Party's 20% stance on these issues has shown its vulnerability to radical influences.

Open borders have been an operational political ploy to gain votes for the Democrat Party, and their resistance to reforms aimed at election fraud, has led them to support the 20% side of this voting issue. According to Pew Research Center, "83% of Americans, including wide majorities of Democrats, Independents, Whites, Blacks, and Latinos, favor voter ID requirements." According to Gallup, "84% of Americans support voter ID, with 98% of Republicans, 84% of Independents, and 67% of Democrats on board — while an equally robust 83% back proof of citizenship for voter registration." The SAVE Act (Safeguard American Voter Eligibility Act), is a federal bill requiring documentary proof of U.S. citizenship to register to vote in a federal election. This is meant to ensure that only U.S. citizens can register for federal elections. To politically oppose the 80% positive public opinion on this issue, on the grounds you are in the majority, is delusionary.

Many of the 80%-20% issues, where the liberal left embraces the 20% side, are closely related to attacks upon Christian values. According to WebMD, "Transgender is a general term that describes people whose gender identity, or their 'internal sense' ... does not match their sex... at birth." The NCTE estimates there are about 1.4 million transgender people living in the US. In addition to the male/female reversal of genders, other transgenders confuse the matter even more by claiming to be a mix of both genders, or neither. The terms "non-binary" or "genderqueer" are also sometimes used but the definition of these terms differ from person to person. Many transgender people use hormone therapies, surgeries, and other procedures to change their bodies to better match what they see their gender to be. This is like the mental disorder called Body Integrity Dysphoria and is pure delusion and another attempt to deny God. Denying the existence of God and creating false victim-hoods are at the root of many of the 20% issues that liberals support. Transgender ideology promotes the idea that humans can determine the sex of a person, and global warming or climate change promotes the idea that humans can control the weather; both claim humans have Godly power.

If you look closely, anti-God is often the foundation of liberal ideology. Liberals have created victims out of perpetrators and if a person fears illegal aliens, or prison inmates on early release, or trans-shooters, or the George Floyds of the world, you are a racist, homophobic, transphobic or just plain evil. On March 22, a Loyola University Chicago student, Sheridan Gorman, was shot and killed by an illegal alien from Venezuela, who had been arrested in 2023 and then released back into the US population by the Biden administration. One local government official said she thought Sheridan might have been shot because she startled the masked killer. Their delusion is becoming violent: if your political enemy is evil any reaction can be justified, even killing them. According to the FEDERALIST, some on the left "have shown sympathy for David Mangione, the man who murdered a private sector CEO over corporate policies... Approximately half of the Democratic party says violence, and even assassination, is a valid form of political activity." Delusionary!

What is the result of their delusion?

2nd Thessalonians 2:11 answers that question: And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie. This is speaking of the biggest lie of all, which will be told by anti-Christ just before the true Jesus Christ returns to us, but the result is always the same; when through delusion you believe a lie you are deceived. We are told the same thing, and more, in Isaiah 66:4, I also will choose their delusions, and will bring their fears upon them; because when I called, none did answer; when I spake, they did not hear: but they did evil before mine eyes, and chose that in which I delighted not.

God is in control, what we are seeing is all part of His plan, He "will choose their delusions, and will bring their fears upon them." As we draw nearer to the true Jesus Christ's return, we should expect the delusions to grow greater. Matthew 24: 24 For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect. The delusion that we humans have the power to change a person's sex or control the weather is only the beginning, there is much greater deception to come.
